

County, City 'Cooperate' On Streets

A unique county-city agreement for road improvements within Klamath Falls has drawn considerable interest from other cities in Oregon.

City Manager Robert Kyle said Tuesday there have been 29 requests from other cities for details of the agreement in which Klamath County budgets money for the improvement of Klamath Falls streets. During the 1961-62 fiscal year, the county budgeted $15,500 for the program.

Primary improvement this year has been the resurfacing of a portion of East Main Street. Determination of priorities are decided by criteria such as traffic volume, tons of commerce and whether or not the street connects with others.

Klamath Falls Mayor Robert E. Veatch spoke last week at the League of Oregon Cities meeting in Portland and explained the cooperative street program and invited interested cities to write for further information. Twenty nine cities had responded as of Tuesday.

Dealer Tells 'Resentment'

SEATTLE (AP) — An antique dealer being tried on a charge of grand larceny has testified childhood resentment of being a Jew led to a life of deception.

Raoul Guy Rockwell, born Rockwell Guy Muldavin in Manhattan 38 years ago tomorrow, gave that testimony Tuesday. He is accused of cheating his mother-in-law, Mrs. Clifford Winkler Sr., out of $10,000.

He said he told Mrs. Winkler he planned to buy a collection of Indian handiwork with the money, but the deal fell through after he was bilked by a Canadian to whom he advanced $500.

Rockwell said after that he couldn't face his new bride, Evelyn Emerson Rockwell, and Mrs. Winkler, her stepmother, so he left Aug. 4, 1960.

He said the balance of the $10,000 went partly for traveling to San Francisco and then to the East Coast. He was arrested in New York City last December.

Rockwell told of being sensitive about being a Jew and said that was the main reason he changed his name, had his nose straightened and dyed his hair.

He said he frequently told lies about himself and misrepresented himself in Seattle as a Fulbright scholar, a university graduate, a war hero and a world traveler.

Asst. Prosecutor Anthony Savage asked Rockwell if the Winklers received a letter purportedly signed by a Maj. John Riley. Rockwell said they did and it described him as having served with conspicuous gallantry as an Army intelligence officer from 1909 to 1945.

Parents Fight Firing

BEAVERTON (AP) — A school board executive meeting Tuesday night was adjourned without taking any action on the firing of its superintendent, when more than 300 parents showed up to protest the action.

The meeting was called as an executive session by Albert Jensen, chairman of the board of Beaverton School District No. 48, to consider firing D. Herbert Armstrong, the superintendent of the district.

But the directors closed the meeting and agreed to meet in executive session Dec. 11. Jensen and board member Dr. Vernon Hansen then left under a barrage of jeers from the parents.

City Council Awards Hangar Roof Repair Job

A contract was awarded Tuesday to Commercial Klamath Insulation Company of Klamath Falls for a $1,695 repair job to the roof of the main hangar at the municipal airport.

Bids on the project were opened Monday night at the regular weekly meeting of the Klamath Falls City Council.

Another contract, this one for Buena Vista Sewer District (Unit No. 30), was expected to be signed Wednesday afternoon. Third reading was given Monday night to an ordinance authorizing a contract with Moe's Inter-city Construction Company, Eugene, for the sewer system. Moe's low bid on the system was $99,922.95. Construction will begin early in November. No one showed up for two scheduled public hearings Monday night and the council went ahead with first and second readings of ordinances ordering annexation of the new Oregon Technical Institute site north of Klamath Falls and the reassessment of a street improvement district in the vicinity of South Sixth Street, Washburn Way and Pershing Way.

The so-called anti-litter ordinance was also given first and second readings. The ordinance is designed to place controls on all debris and trash on property inside the city.

In other action, the council: 1. Gave third and final reading to the sidewalk repair ordinance placing responsibility for repairing unsafe sidewalks with the owners of abutting property.

2. Ordered that an ordinance be prepared condemning an old unpainted shed at the corner of East Main and Applegate streets.

The shed is owned by the estate of Bertha Duke.

3. Called for preparations of plans and specifications for a municipal mausoleum by the J. C. Milne Company of Portland.

4. Gave first and second readings to an ordinance authorizing sale of lots seven and eight, block 309, Darrow Addition, to D. W. Starkey for $2,600.

Councilman Ladd Hoyt complained about street light vandalism on Lakeshore Drive. He said the lights are installed for public safety and yet vandals shoot them with guns and break them with rocks. City police were notified of the complaint.

Next council meeting will be Nov. 6 because next Monday is the fifth Monday of the month.
