

High Waistline Gains In Favor

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI)—The high waistline silhouette for spring gets added supporters as more manufacturers preview their collections for the next fashion season.

Latest to join the ranks is Larry Aldrich, whose chief designer, Marie McCarthy, featured the above-the-normal waistline in both daytime and evening clothes.

"The raised waistline in varying degrees is important for spring," said Aldrich as he showed his collection late Wednesday.

Aldrich's designer defined the new waistline with wide insets of fabric through the midriff, with seaming or bands of fabric under the bosom, with jackets closing at the bust instead of at the waist, or with vertical darts sewn from the hem of brief jackets to shape them to the mid-section of the body.

Aldrich showed normal waistlines too—many of them belted tightly in black patent.

The Aldrich collection also added emphasis to the soft look which promises to take over by spring. Floating chiffons are replacing the stiffened silks of past seasons, the bias cut abounds in all pace-setting collections, and gathers, flares and pleats soften the harsher straight-lined silhouette of recent years.

"We predict it will be a soft suit spring," said Aldrich. Typical of the soft suits at this firm was a group whose skirts looked slim when the models stood still. But the skirts swung gracefully when the models walked because of all-around gathers at the waist.

FUN FORECAST — Halloween night, Tuesday, Oct. 31, will find all children of students and faculty of Ore. Tech, living on campus or in Klamath Falls, having a wonderful time. Responsible for the plans are Tech Mates, Ore. Tech student wives group. From 6:30 to 7 p.m., tots to 11-year-olds are invited to parade in front of the Student Union and prizes will be awarded the best costumes. A teen party for 11-year-olds through high school age with games, dancing, and costume judging will be held in the SU ballroom from 7 until 10 p.m. Shown left to right, in front, are Zona, Zreata and Mike Moody, who put on a dress rehearsal for their mother, Pat Moody, left, in back, and Barbara Engle, Halloween party chairmen. They will be assisted by Ruth Hodson, Doris Stonecker, Joy Thomas and Elzada Henderson.

CHECK NOW

Now, before winter really gets its grip upon the land, is the time to have the home's heating system checked. At a minimum, be sure clean filters are installed in forced-air systems, and that blowers motors are oiled.

Homemakers Are Entertained

Mrs. Frank Payge's homemaking class members were guests in the country home of Mrs. J. Walter Browning as a part of their study on making the home attractive.

The hostess had many attractive flower arrangements on display for the interest of the class. Mrs. Browning visited the class earlier and gave a demonstration on flower arrangements, for which she is well known.

Refreshments were served to Dorothy Baumgart, Adelia Cacka, Pearl Calkins, Pat Henderson, Linda Ingram, Cathy Kenyon, Pam Kirkpatrick, Louise Martin, Carol Micka, Diana O'Riley, Ellen and Evelyn Rajnus, Emily Rose and Wanda Sarutski.

Cook chicken livers in butter and chop; add to scrambled eggs just before the mixture sets. Nice for lunch or brunch.

We The Women

Status: Mink "Out" -- Shelter "In"

Ruth Milllett

Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

I see in the papers that furriers' symbol just can't be financed by Mr. and Mrs. Upper Middle-class even on a buy-now, pay-later basis.

It would be a fine thing if the next status symbol turned out to be the family bomb shelter, with the people who once tried to outdo each other with big cars, mink coats, swimming pools and cabin cruisers all going happily underground in search of status.

That would at least get people digging instead of taking a defeatist attitude toward self-protection.

And it wouldn't be so expensive a status symbol as the second car, or any more expensive than the swimming pool or mink coat.

The saving grace about the bomb shelter as a status symbol is this: after we got through bragging about our shelters, and showing them off, and making the kind of paintings that are a status most of them conversationally.

Fashion Flair

Does your closet hold the secret of your clothes success? In it there are some favorites that you choose because you have a holiday mood and want to look your best. Others are just average clothes that have really worn out their welcome. They don't do anything vibrant for you. We have to educate ourselves to select clothes that do the most for us. Get to know whether a high or low neckline has value for you. Know whether the skirt should be full or slim for your figure. When you get understanding, loveliness in dressing will be attributed to you.
