Horse-Roping Fun

By Donovan A. Moore

Paste a picture of a horse on heavy cardboard. Place a small nail in the cardboard and take turns tossing three jar rings around the nail. If your jar ring lands on the nail, you have roped your horse.

Winding the Web

Are you having a spooky Halloween party this week? Then a colorful web for the witches to wind is the game for you.

To make your preparations, take lots of colored string, a different color and a different length for each player. The center of the web may be on a table with a big fat spider sitting next to it. All the strings start here and follow a mischievous course around table legs, over chairs, under books, through holes, across each other, over pictures, into other rooms, each going a different way until they reach a surprise caught in the spider's web.

Each player takes a string and starts winding it into a ball without breaking it until they reach the end. The first one to bring back the surprise—which may be candy, apples, or anything else you may wish—will win a big prize. The others keep the surprises they find at the web.

Halloween Artists By Tom Jones

Each player sits on the floor with a pencil and paper. Turn out the lights and tell each one to draw some Halloween object—ghost, black cat, owl, jack-o'-lantern, witch, etc.—writing what it is just below his picture.

Seven minutes later, turn on the lights and select the best art work. Most of it is pretty funny.

Riddles! Riddles!

- Why is the figure 9 like a peacock?
- If one man carries a sack of bran and another man carries two sacks, which load is heavier?

Answers: 1. Without its tail it is nothing. 2. The first; the other's two sacks are empty.
