The Perfect Fall Day -- Through A Woman's Eyes

Ruth Millett Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

"A perfect autumn day, says a magazine writer, 'is one when the lawn no longer needs mowing and the leaves haven't yet started to fall.'"

That's a perfect autumn day from a man's point of view. From a woman's, autumn is perfect when—

The weather is still warm enough to justify putting off the boring chore of storing summer clothes with: "There may be another hot spell."

The children are blessedly back in school but the PTA hasn't yet gotten down to work.

The wife of the great outdoorsman can quit cooking fish and switch to cooking quail.

Women's clubs have begun to meet but haven't yet begun to work.

She hasn't yet tried on last winter's clothes so she hasn't had to face the fact that every skirt in her wardrobe will have to be shortened again.

The kids haven't yet started passing around colds in school as nonchalantly as they pass around notes.

The teachers haven't had time to call her in for a conference because junior is misbehaving or spending all of his time staring out of the window.

She can, in good conscience, tell the kids the weather is too nice for them to sit inside and watch TV. She can put off fall housecleaning a little longer with a free mind because the weather is just too nice to stay inside. She can still kid herself that this year she will be ready for Christmas ahead of time.
