JAN. 7—Post Card rates rise as shown.

POSTAL RATES INCREASES — On Jan. 7, 1963, postal rate hikes go into effect. Pay hikes and postal deficits are two good reasons why Uncle Sam is raising the cost of nearly all classes of postage. Hikes will average about one-half cent per family per day. Schedules for second, third and fourth class mail are posted in all post offices and their branches. Shown above in chart form are the new and old rates and the restrictions on the size of envelopes.

Night Club Owners Mourn Passing Of Expense Account Bon Vivants In Government Crackdown

EDITOR'S NOTE — The government's crackdown on expense account spending has been cited as the reason for the closing of two Hollywood restaurants. Restaurant and night club owners in other cities are divided as to how much the new laws will hurt them. United Press International polled owners of the nation's highest priced night spots on whether the era of the big-time spender is coming to an end.

When "Prince Mike" Romanoff closes his Hollywood restaurant New Year's Day many nightclub owners in other cities will be mourning with him.

Like the bogus prince, they fear the government's new tax policies may be the last nail in the coffin of the big-time expense account spender.

Beauticians Honor Ten

CHICAGO (UPI) — America's first lady, a pair of princesses and seven actresses were the "ten best coiffured" women of 1962, according to a poll by the Helene Curtis Guild of Professional Beauticians.

would have some effect. But the dissenters said they were doing fine and expected to keep it up. Toots Shor, prominent New York salon keeper, summed up this view: "It's like an athlete. When you're out, you're there. When you're out, you're out."

Side With Prince
 Others, particularly in the West and in Florida, were in the Romanoff camp. One, ex-movie comedian Ben Blue, beat the prince to the punch.

Blue moaned the passing of his live-it-up and charge-it-up clientele as he closed his Santa Monica, Calif., supper club Dec. 17. The poker-faced comedian said an analysis of patronage during the past three months revealed "a conspicuous absence of credit card and charge account patrons."

"It's going to be a low dollar from now on for the night clubs," Blue said. Dave Chasen, owner of another Hollywood restaurant, said the restriction on expense account entertainment "hurts all around... it was a stupid thing for the government to do."

To take up the slack, Chasen suggested that businessmen be allowed to bring their wives along on across-the-table business deals. "Sometimes the wife is the greatest asset," he said.

Outlook Gloomy
 Miami hotel owners also reported a gloomy outlook for 1963 and blamed a growing scarcity of credit card bon vivants. "The crackdown on expense accounts has hurt us noticeably because when people know they will have to account for their spending, they don't spend so much," said the manager of the Americana Hotel.

San Francisco restaurants reported expense account spending down from 5 to 10 per cent and hotels said a similar tailing off was showing up in rentals to six. Operators of swank restaurants in Washington, D. C., agreed with Romanoff that new tax laws have affected business. Most outspoken was Mrs. Jean Martin, who manages the Espionage and Rue Royal restaurants in Georgetown. She said, "I'm getting worried to death."

This marked the third time Mrs. Kennedy was named among the best dressed women of the world. She was on the "ten best coiffured" list in 1959 and again in 1961.

Timber Operators Hold Annual Meet

The fourth annual meeting of Klamath Basin timber operators will be held at the Winema Motor Hotel on Thursday, Jan. 3.

Originating near the close of the termination of the Klamath Indian reservation, these meetings bring together timber users and timber sellers to discuss the market conditions for the coming year.

The annual meeting has proven beneficial to Klamath Basin timber purchasers and their stumpage procurement program. Timber in this area is obtained from six national forests, the Winema, Fremont, Deschutes, Umpqua, Modoc and Klamath as well as from the Bureau of Land Management, state of Oregon, and from Indian trust lands.

Representatives from these timber selling agencies are expected to be in attendance to present their calendar year 1963 sales programs.

In announcing the meeting, Wayne Gaskins, forester, indicated it would begin at 6:15 p.m. with presentations scheduled immediately after dinner.
