Fishermen and Fish

By Betty Kahn

When you play this game, let half the players be Fishermen and half of them be Fish. Each Fish's feet are tied together in imitation of a tail, so that his only means of moving is to jump with both feet together. Each Fisherman has a stick with a string for fishing.

Mark off two spaces where you are going to play: one to be the "lake" and the other the "shore." The Fishermen stand on the shore while all the Fish jump about in the lake trying to avoid being touched by the Fishermen's strings. If they are, they're caught! If a Fisherman steps into the lake area, he is considered out of the game. If a Fish accidentally hops onto the shore, he's a dead fish and leaves the game.

When only three players are left, the side with two wins.

Whisper This!

By Ragna Eskil

Here's a simple game that makes for laughs and that can be played by players of any age sitting around a circle or at a table. The first player whispers a nonsensical statement such as, "Pigs say 'quack-quack,'" or "Cows and doves coo and moo," or some tongue twister to his neighbor who, in turn, whispers to his neighbor and so around the group. Action should be fast and no repeating. The last player tells out loud what his neighbor said—it is usually quite different from the original words!
