Storm Slows Hunting On Weyerhaeuser Land

Unfavorable weather conditions prevented sportsmen who hunted on Weyerhaeuser Company lands from having another banner season, despite the large population of big game animals in the state this year.

Dates Set For Classes In Lakeview

LAKEVIEW—Dates have been set for the evening adult education classes being sponsored by the adult education department of the Lakeview High School. The classes are planned in the area of home economics and vocational agriculture. The three Bishop sewing courses, to be taught by Mrs. Mary Abramson, will meet as follows: Bishop I, Monday, Jan. 14; Bishop II, Wednesday, Jan. 16; Bishop III, Tuesday, Jan. 15. The millinery course, to be taught by Mrs. Buernice McCormick, will meet Monday, Jan. 29. The course outline in millinery, is designed to include basic stitching and hat design. The course fee is set at $8 and a minimum of 12 students is required. Persons interested in further information about these courses should contact either the instructors or Bob Elden, adult director, at Whitehall 7-2335 or WH 7-3212. Two courses in vocational agriculture are also being planned for this winter. They include farm art welding and farm law. These will start the week of Jan. 21 and continue for 10 weeks, with meetings one night each week. Further information can be secured through Bob Elden.

Alteration Study Slated

A workshop on "Altering Ready-to-Wear Dresses" will be held through the Home Economics Extension Program during the month of February reports Mrs. Ruth G. Dyer, county extension agent. Anyone desiring to take part in this workshop must register for it by Jan. 14. Anyone interested may secure information through the Home Economics Extension office located on the second floor of the Post Office Building or by phoning TU 4-8151. The purpose of this workshop will be to recognize standards of good fit in dresses, blouses and skirts; to decide on the advisability of making alterations to improve fit; to know the principles of alterations to achieve good fit; and to practice proper techniques of altering clothing for a good fit. Each homemaker will need to work on a dress, blouse or skirt to learn the practices that will be taught.

Bridge Tourney Held Thursday

North-south section winners were Lesna Robertson and Dick Briggs (66.7 per cent), followed by 2, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tarr and 3, Pauline Offield - Martha Morris.

Study Awards

PORTLAND (UPI)—The Oregon AFL-CIO said today it will award six scholarships totaling $2,400 to high school students this year. The awards will be based on an examination on labor and industrial problems. There is a fourth visit to Lane County not yet scheduled.

The Oct. 12 storm was particularly detrimental to the hunters. Many forest access roads were blocked and, despite the efforts of woods crews, many remained blocked through much of the big game season. Unusual weather conditions affected game movement patterns, too, making things even more difficult. The result was that the big game harvest did not come up to last year's record results, at least on Weyerhaeuser lands, according to reports by company woods supervisors. It was estimated by company officials that more than 40,000 hunter visits were made on five company tree farms where it was possible to make fair estimates. Game kill estimates included: Vail and McDonald Tree Farms, 150 bucks and 100 does; St. Helena Tree Farm, 105 bull elk, 41 cow elk, 347 deer. White River Tree Farm near Enumclaw reported a light kill during the regular season but a good kill during the extended buck season. Elk hunting at White River was good, with at least 50 bulls being taken. No estimates were available for the Clemons Tree Farm. Access is through many ungated roads, and accurate figures are almost impossible to obtain. In Oregon, the same pattern prevailed. Comparatively heavy use of company lands resulted in a kill below 1961's results. This held true at both the Calapooya Tree Farm near Eugene and the Millicoma Tree Farm near Coos Bay. There were 66 deer and 84 elk taken from the Millicoma. Because of the open nature of the pine country in the Klamath Falls region, no accurate estimate of results could be made for the Klamath Falls Tree Farm. Hunters usually have better than average success in areas which have been logged in recent years. This is because browse grows well in these areas and animal populations consequently increase to the maximum. Game animals are also easier to see than in densely wooded areas. Because of the increased game populations, hunters expected a record harvest this year. But then the Columbus Day storm came along, knocking down trees over access roads and discouraging many hunters from even trying to reach their favorite spots. Many a man, too, had his hands full with home repairs after the storm, and the hunting rifle was often replaced by the hammer and saw. Hunting pressure in some areas was down considerably. Vandalism and theft on company lands continued to decrease during hunting season. A company spokesman said, "We are encouraged by the overall improvement in the conduct of people using our woodlands during hunting season. Considering the number of people making recreational use of our land, theft and damage is light and is getting lighter." One branch manager commented, "The hunters deserve a pat on the back this year as the vandalism and thievery was at a minimum." Company officials credit cooperation of organized sportsmen's groups for much of the improvement over the years. Just as one example of cooperation with landowners, the Seattle Chapter of Washington State Big Game Council offered a $200 reward for information leading to the conviction of a person found guilty of stealing, damaging or destroying any landowner's property. This is the second year the Seattle Chapter has offered the reward, which has yet to be paid.

Disregard of traffic signs and other signs was a problem at some branches, which resulted in some trespassing, road damage, towing of bogged-down cars, and at least one arrest.

There was some theft and vandalism on Weyerhaeuser lands, of course. Hardest hit was one Southwest Washington branch that totaled up a bill of more than $1,000. Some other tree farms reported virtually no damage or theft.

A few hunters got lost and three forest fires were started on company lands through the season.

The company continued expansion of its practice of furnishing maps and verbal directions to hunters. Use of maps specially printed for hunters was extended this year. Hunters were generally appreciative for the maps and for the privileges given them, the woodsmen reported.
