

THE DOCTOR'S MAILBAG Measle Vaccination Postponed By Tests

By W. G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Readers, note: Some days ago I stated that a vaccine for measles was coming into the market. Since then, many persons have asked their doctors for immunization, and they have been told that the vaccine was not obtainable. Your doctor is right. Do not blame him for not having it. Blame me for suggesting that the vaccine might be available.

A series of controlled tests has been made by selected clinics throughout the country. Distribution of the vaccine for general use is held in abeyance until the result of these tests is definitive. Mouth breathing is much more of a threat to the welfare of your child than thumb-sucking. If not corrected it may distort the entire face. The nostrils may become pinched from lack of use and the

Hap Caldwell Attends Meet

Klamath County Assessor Hap Caldwell departed for Bend Wednesday afternoon to attend the Eastern Oregon Livestock Conference, slated during the hours of 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Thursday and Friday, at the Thunderbird Motel. Accompanying Caldwell were two other employees of the assessor's office, Ray Brackman, supervisor of appraisals, and Jim Grimes, head of the personal property department.

Represented at the conference will be people in the sheep and cattle industry and assessors of 18 Eastern Oregon counties and several others of counties in Western Oregon.

The conference, open to the public, is held annually to set livestock values and depreciation schedules for machinery and equipment to be in effect during the current year.

Caldwell said he would return here following the conference Friday.

facial expression may erroneously suggest stupidity.

The child who is a mouth-breather exposes his tonsils and adenoids to cold and contaminated air which may be an important factor in causing diseases of these organs. On the purely esthetic side, the child himself will lose much of the joy of fragrances that are so much better appreciated by those who breathe normally.

Eating with a closed mouth is also less distressing to watch. The mouth-breather also forfeits some of the protection afforded by odors that warn of danger, such as an unit gas jet or smoke in a burning house.

Dr. R. W. Kullberg refers to these children as nasal cripples. He found that many asthmatic youngsters who breathed through their mouths had had severe asthmatic attacks inhaled far less of the offending pollen when they breathed through the nose. In some this was all that was needed to stop the asthmatic attacks.

Because it requires a little more muscular effort to breathe through the nose, nose breathing actually strengthens the diaphragm and chest muscles. Japanese swimmers discovered long ago that nasal breathing helped to develop greater endurance. Their trainers forbid the use of the nasal plugs sometimes used by swimmers in this country and insist on nasal breathing both in and out of the water.

Other disadvantages of mouth breathing are that it causes dryness of the mouth and tongue and fails to warm the air that enters the lungs.

Mouth breathing may be caused by an obstruction in the nasal passages or may be due simply to habit. An examination by a doctor will quickly tell whether your child has an obstruction and, if so, whether it is merely inflammatory requiring only medical treatment or is due to some structural change that requires an operation.

In some children mouth breathing is due to dental defects.

Team Shows Power Fast

By OSWALD JACOBY

The first international bridge match was played in 1935. The American team that defeated the French, who were then the champions of Europe, consisted of Howard Schenken, Michael T. Gottlieb, David Bruce and this writer. Our team, known as the Four Aces, won so handily that the next match was in 1950. This time we beat Great Britain. Howard and I were members of that team also, but I did not play. In between the time that we won our right to represent the United States and the match, I found myself back in uniform and over in Korea.

Howard and Peter Leventritt will be members of this year's American team and Howard's comment was, "It is a good omen to be playing with Jacoby again." Of course, this time Jacoby is my son, Jim. I agree about the good omen and hope that when my newborn grandson reaches playing age, he will find himself on a team with Howard, someday.

Howard believes in showing strength quickly. Hence his jump response of two spades followed by his later jumps to four and six. On the way, Howard found time to show diamond support. Peter was able to count to thirteen tricks without much trouble. The game was duplicate. Since honors do not count in that game, Peter put the grand slam in no-trump which counts more than spades.

Spuds Taken From Cellar At Bonanza

Ten sacks of certified potatoes, valued at $450, have been stolen from a spud cellar on the property of B. J. Jendrzewski, Bonanza, in one of two cases investigated Tuesday by the Klamath County Sheriff's Office.

Jendrzewski said he had been collecting the special potatoes for the past three years and urges the thief to contact him and arrange an exchange for an equal number of the regular variety.

Sheriff Murray "Red" Britton reported the cellar was burglarized sometime between the hours of 6:30 p.m. Saturday, and 5 a.m. Sunday.

Also being investigated is the vandalism of a house occupied by Louis Lyon, Box 412, Malin. The victim told the sheriff that he returned to his home late Saturday night and discovered windows had been smashed and plasterboard broken on the walls and ceilings in various rooms of the house.

Empty beer cans were scattered throughout the dwelling, he said. Lyon did not estimate his loss due to the damage.

Woman Sets Mark In Blood Donation

MOUNT SHASTA—Mrs. Pauline Crowder, Mount Shasta housewife, has embarked on a program of donating blood at the rate of one pint every three months. She does this with no inconvenience, and her type "O" blood is in demand for emergency transfusions.

Since beginning this schedule, she has donated 27 pints. As a young woman in her native Montreal and after coming to the U.S. as a war bride, she donated blood at every opportune time. She thinks her donations total not less than 40 pints. That is a staggering total of five gallons. Blessed with an abundance of health, she is happy to be able to do this. She stated that at no time had a blood donation left her feeling weak. Instead she always feels a physical and spiritual uplift after the gift to humanity.

The entire Crowder household of three persons is a busy one. Mrs. Crowder's husband, Randolph Sr., enjoys sky diving for recreation. Randolph Jr. goes in for high school athletics, specializing in football. Mrs. Crowder is also active in the VFW Auxiliary and sewing and knitting circles.
