The three-man board, headed by Prof. J. Keith Mann of Stamford University, suggested a "stair step" plan where railroad unemployment insurance benefits would be augmented with payments by Southern Pacific.

The cumbined benefits would provide furloughed employes 70 per cent of their earnings for up to one year, based on length of service, followed by a period of benefits at the 60 per cent level. At present, railroad unemployment insurance provides a maximum benefit of $51 a week for a period dependent on length of service.

The board said furlough and related benefits should be paid only if Southern Pacific and the Pacific and
