How To Help Couple Wed 'Winter' Skin In Dunsmuir

Winter skin is an unfortunate but common effect of our comfortable indoor living. Artificial heat often dehydrates the skin so it becomes papery to the touch and the surface looks parched as well. The skin becomes taut when you wash it with soap and water and makeup goes on spottily. The flaky appearance is most noticeable when you apply powder.

If this sounds like a description of your skin, have courage—there is a cure. Try a soothing, lubricating mask. Cleanse the skin first, then stroke on night cream lavishly. Now, hold a very hot washcloth close to your face. The steam will warm the cream and help it to penetrate the fine top layers of skin. Repeat the process, keeping the washcloth steamy hot, for five minutes. Then gently remove most of the cream with tissues, leaving on a fine film as a base for foundation and make-up.

After a week of "facials," you should notice a definite improvement in your skin's appearance.

THE LIGHT TOUCH
A cornice which is attached to the ceiling will provide direct light to "wash" a wall, drapery or window area. The downward lighting also provides a dramatic effect on brick, stone, fabric or any textured walls.

Altar Society Has Party

MOUNT SHASTA—St. Anthony's parish hall in Mount Shasta was the scene Dec. 11 of the Altar Society's annual Christmas party.

Bianco Pastega showed slides taken on a recent European trip to Venice, Rome and Switzerland. Refreshments of fruit cake, fruit bread, Italian cookies and coffee were served. Secret pals were revealed and names drawn for next year. There was also the regular gift exchange.
