Long Mourning Mourned By Bereaved Children

By ANN LANDERS
Dear Ann Landers: I'm a girl 15 who is writing this letter in half of myself and my 17-year-old brother.
Our father died three months ago. He was a fine man and we loved and respected him. For two months after his death we didn't go anywhere except to school, to church, and to the cemetery with Mom. We didn't turn on the radio or the hi-fi or the TV.
Now, both my brother and I want to date, and get active in school affairs again. Mom says we are blaspheming our father's memory by even thinking of amusing ourselves. She turns off the music when she comes into our rooms and lectures us about respect for the deceased. According to last one full year, she wears black from head to foot and says she plans to do so indefinitely.
Are we wrong to feel as we do? Please print this letter and your advice. Talking to Mother does no good. — RESPECTFUL BUT LIVING
Dear Respectful: Prolonged mourning is unhealthy and it serves no useful purpose. Teenagers should not be expected to exclude themselves from school activities and isolate themselves from life when a parent dies. The meaningful way to honor your father's memory is by being the kind of children you know your Dad would want you to be.
Ask your clergyman to speak to your mother. She's not thinking clearly these days.

Dear Ann Landers: In a recent column you told a woman she was sappy as a maple tree in April.
Up here in Wisconsin the maple trees get sappy in February. I thought you might like to know. Thank you. — COLEMAN, WIS. READER
Dear Reader: I appreciate the information, but February doesn't rhyme with maple. I know—neither does April, but it's a lot closer.
Dear Ann Landers: Is it possible for a woman who has had two marriage failures to make a go of it with a man who has never been married?
At age 17 I jumped into one of those war marriages—impetuous, crazy — everybody was doing it. When he came home three years later we had nothing in common. After seven months of no communication we were divorced. The following year I married a man who seemed devoted and kind. He told me his wife had died of cancer and he was raising their two little girls. He turned out to be a sadist and a liar. I learned his wife had committed suicide. When he beat the youngest girl with an appliance cord and knocked me across the room I filed for divorce. I asked for, and got the girls.
Now I've met a real man. He is my age (40), and is the greatest person I've ever known. He loves the girls and wants to marry me. Everyone thinks it would be wonderful. I know it would be—for me. But what about him? Please advise.—BLUE JAY
Dear Blue Jay: You have a good understanding of why your two previous marriages failed. The fact that you seem preoccupied with the happiness of your friend rather than your own happiness is also an encouraging signal. And, too, none of the elements which contributed to the failures seem present in this relationship.
If the man wants to marry you, with full knowledge of your past, I say go ahead. Girl, and good luck.

Police List Theft Cases

The thefts of two pairs of shoes and a rear gear assembly from a sports car, and a case of vandalism were reported to Klamath Falls police over the weekend.
Carl Charles, 250 Division Street, told police his shoes and a pair belonging to a fellow worker were stolen about 1:20 p.m. Sunday from 222 Spring Street.
The men have been working at the address and left their shoes on the premises. The shoes had a total value of $28.
A juvenile boy was named as being responsible for the theft after he was seen wearing one of the pairs of shoes. The boy apparently lives nearby and was seen several times by the victims wandering around the premises.
Gary Olsen, 2311 Wantland Avenue, said a gear housing worth $125 was stolen from his garage between Jan. 13 and 18. Olsen said it was a special racing gear assembly and he told police he thought he knew who might have taken it.
A hole was knocked in the garage wall and the thief apparently dragged the assembly out the hole and through an adjacent garage.
A large plate glass window at the E. P. Remick residence, 433 St. Francis Street, was broken by vandals between 8 and 10 p.m. Sunday, police report.
Remick said a large rock was hurled through the window. He estimated the damage at $35.

Post Says Adlai Would Give Up Guantanamo

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Saturday Evening Post said today that Adlai E. Stevenson proposed that the National Security Council consider giving up the U. S. Naval Base at Guantanamo, if necessary, to avoid military action in the Cuban crisis last October.
The report was made in an article written by Post Washington editor Stewart Alsop, who identified Stevenson's U.N. aide, Clayton Fritchey, as his source. Fritchey, reached at his office at the U. S. Mission to the United Nations, said he had "no comment for the present" on Alsop's article.
Alsop and Washington newsman Charles Bartlett wrote an article for the Dec. 8 Post which triggered a controversy over Stevenson's role in the Security Council's debate on the Cuban crisis.
The White House was widely accused of using Alsop and Bartlett as a channel for discrediting Stevenson by picturing him as the proponent of a "soft" position in dealing with the Russian arms build up in Cuba. The President denied this.
In the new article in the Post, Alsop said both he and Bartlett had lengthy talks with Fritchey, an old and trusted friend, in order to get Stevenson's exact position, which was at odds with the majority position of the Security Council's executive committee.
"Mr. Stevenson's willingness to consider yielding Guantanamo and the elimination of other foreign bases was, of course, at the heart of his difference with the executive committee majority," Alsop wrote.
Alsop quoted a Fritchey-approved summary of Stevenson's position as "Stevenson was only willing to discuss Guantanamo and the European bases with the Communists after a neutralization of the Cuban missiles."

Cal Legislature Gets Aid To Education Bill

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—The legislature Monday received its first major aid to education bill of the current session.
The measure called for a total increase of $115 million in state aid to the public schools and enactment of the controversial countywide school tax.
Introduced by Assemblyman Charles B. Garrigus, D-Reedley, the bill carries out recommendations made by the California Teachers Association. However, the countywide tax proposal has already been approved in principle by Gov. Edmund G. Brown and the State Board of Education.
Actually, the tax measure is not altogether a tax, although it will raise about $25 million in new revenue from some local school districts. Its primary purpose, according to supporters, is to equalize taxes between various districts in each county.
In Los Angeles County, for instance, residents in one district pay at the rate of $1.82 per $100 assessed valuation while those in another pay $6.33.
The Garrigus Bill would require

Groups Oppose Meals Increase

CORVALLIS (UPI)—The women's interhall council and men's inter-dormitory council at Oregon State University have announced opposition to a proposed $40 a year increase in meal costs.
In a joint statement the two groups said they would continue the opposition "as long as the service and the quality of meals" do not improve.
T. F. Adams, director of dormitories, said the increase is needed because student and civil service employees are seeking higher wages.

SHOVS FAIR MODEL
NEW YORK (UPI)—A model of the U.S. pavilion for the 1964 New York World's Fair, larger than a city block and ultra-modern in design, was unveiled Monday by architect Charles Luckman.
The $17 million structure will be eight stories high with exterior walls made from thousands of vari-colored glass pieces reflecting the sun during the day and artificially illuminated at night.
Federal Hall, New York City, served as the first Capitol of the United States after the Constitution was adopted.

'Frat' Force Retreat Feared

PORTLAND (UPI)—The Portland Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People expressed fear here Saturday that the State Board of Higher Education may retreat from its position on racial discrimination in college fraternity and sorority chapters.
Wally Priestley, a NAACP executive board member, said a telegram which endorses a 1961 pledge by the state board has been sent to Dr. R. E. Liewallen, chancellor.
The pledge by the board—which is due to become effective this month—stated it would withdraw recognition from any fraternity or sorority whose national charter requires a local chapter of restricted membership on grounds of race or religion.
"There are indications," said Priestley, "that the board will approve a system of accepting waivers" from national officers releasing Oregon chapters from compliance with discriminating language in the national charter.
Two fraternal organizations are due to report to the state board Tuesday about compliance to the racial discrimination ban.
