Prison Awaits Newsman For Refusing To Reveal Source Of Information

LONDON (UPI) — Lord Chief Justice Parker today sentenced British journalist Desmond Clough to six months in prison for contempt because he refused to identify the source of a news story involving Soviet espionage.

Justice Parker ruled that if the 34-year-old defense correspondent for the Daily Sketch changed his mind within 10 days and names the source to a special tribunal investigating spying in the Admiralty the sentence will be suspended.

Clough was convicted of contempt Thursday at a four hour hearing before Britain's highest court. The case is setting new precedents in the centuries-old history of British jurisprudence.

A spokesman for Clough said the newsman would appeal to the Court of Appeals. If that fails, he still will be able to appeal to the House of Lords, Britain's highest appeals court.

The contempt charge stemmed from Clough's refusal to tell the special tribunal the identity of the government source who told him that information supplied by Soviet spy William John Vassall enabled Russian travelers to turn up at NATO naval maneuvers.

Vassall, a former Admiralty employe, is serving an 18-year prison sentence.

Clough told Parker Thursday that to name his source would be a breach of trust and a betrayal of his profession.

"The freedom of the press would be completely undermined," he said. "I would be breaking a firm trust and I and all journalists feel passionately on this issue of the freedom of the press."

Lord Parker said he had sympathy for Clough, one of a group of journalists who has appeared before the special tribunal.

"In the whole history of this court this has never arisen before—seeking to compel someone in your position to reveal their sources of information," he told the newsman.

But Lord Parker ruled that Clough either would have to give the name of his informant or be held in contempt.

Border Guards Complain Of 'Dear Klaus' Letters

BERLIN (UPI) — East German border guards are complaining they are getting "Dear Klaus" letters from their girls back home.

They say that while they have been watching the Berlin wall to prevent the escape of refugees, Heidi and the other girls are forgetting them and turning to civilians.

This gripe has been voiced by soldiers the world over. But East German Communists take the griping very seriously because the morale of their border guards is low anyway and desertions to the West are so frequent that they patrol the border in pairs.

When Communists face a problem they hold a forum. That is what they did in the case of Sgt. Klaus Schmitter of the 1st Border Brigade who left an army hospital only to be told that Heidi had "found another."

Story in Magazine: The forum, attended by border soldiers and girl workers, was held in East Berlin's state-run Bergmann Borsig factory. A report on it was printed in the women's magazine "Fuer Dich" (For You) entitled "Dispute About Heidi."

A bitter Klaus told the forum that girls do not like the border guards who shoot at refugees, something the Communists know too well.

"Most girls don't have any character any more," he said. "They are egotistic, think only about going out on dates and dancing. If their boy friend goes in the army they look for another."

"All the girls are like Heidi. It didn't suit her that I was in the army. She didn't want to be alone and so she jilted me."

Jutta Lorenz approved of Heidi's conduct. She told the forum "Heidi obviously found someone she liked better than Klaus. A girl doesn't have to bind herself to one man. We have equal rights."

Serves Klaus Right: It served Klaus right, said Gisela Dietrich. "Boys act just the same," she said. "True love, such as it portrayed in novels and films does not exist. I would have done anything for my boy friend and he jilted me. From now on I won't trust any body."

Charities Penalized By Kennedy's Tax Plan, Philanthropists Claim

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Churches, colleges, hospitals and charitable agencies will find it harder to raise money if President Kennedy's new tax proposals are enacted by Congress.

That view was expressed today by leaders in the field of private philanthropy.

They said public support of religious, educational and charitable enterprises is bound to be affected adversely by the new rules on itemized income tax deductions proposed by the President.

Under present law, a taxpayer who itemizes his deductions may deduct every dollar he contributes to such causes (up to 30 per cent of his income).

The new rules proposed by Kennedy would put a 5 per cent "floor" on deductions. It would work like this:

If a person had an income of $10,000, and itemized deductions of $2,000, he would have to subtract 5 per cent of the $10,000, or $500, from his total deductions before claiming them on his tax.

The question troubling private philanthropic agencies is whether middle-income taxpayers would

Klamath Basin Fallout Shelters To Get Stock

Klamath County will be one of the first six counties in the state in which public fallout shelters will be stocked with supplies and equipment at the expense of the federal government, County Civil Defense Director Joe Searles said Friday.

The supplies are expected to arrive in Klamath Falls sometime within the next two weeks and will be stocked in five buildings designated as public shelters, including the Medical - Dental Building, Williams Building and the county courthouse in Klamath Falls and two elevators at the Tulana Farms in Worden.

State Civil Defense Director Robert W. Sandstrom has announced that survival supplies will be moved from the federal government warehouse in Troutdale to six county seats for stocking in 21 buildings licensed as shelters.

The counties, other than Klamath, to receive the first supply shipments will be Benton, Grant, Lake, Umatilla and Yamhill. Potential public shelters are available in 32 of 39 counties in Oregon.

The stocking of the shelters is the beginning of the third step in the national fallout shelter program in which 235 million public and private shelter spaces are being developed to provide the public protection against fallout from nuclear attack.

A total of 1,009 buildings with potential shelter space for 975,000 people were located in Oregon during an engineering survey in 1962; so far, about 470 shelters have been marked.

Each shelter has a capacity for at least 50 people, with 10 square feet per person. These shelters would be between 40 and 1,000 times safer from radiation than the surrounding outside area.

Survival kits for the shelters include high-calorie biscuits, water containers, medical and sanitation supplies and radiation detection instruments. The nine-pound kits, worth about $2.35 per person, will sustain a shelter occupant up to two weeks.

Post Still Open

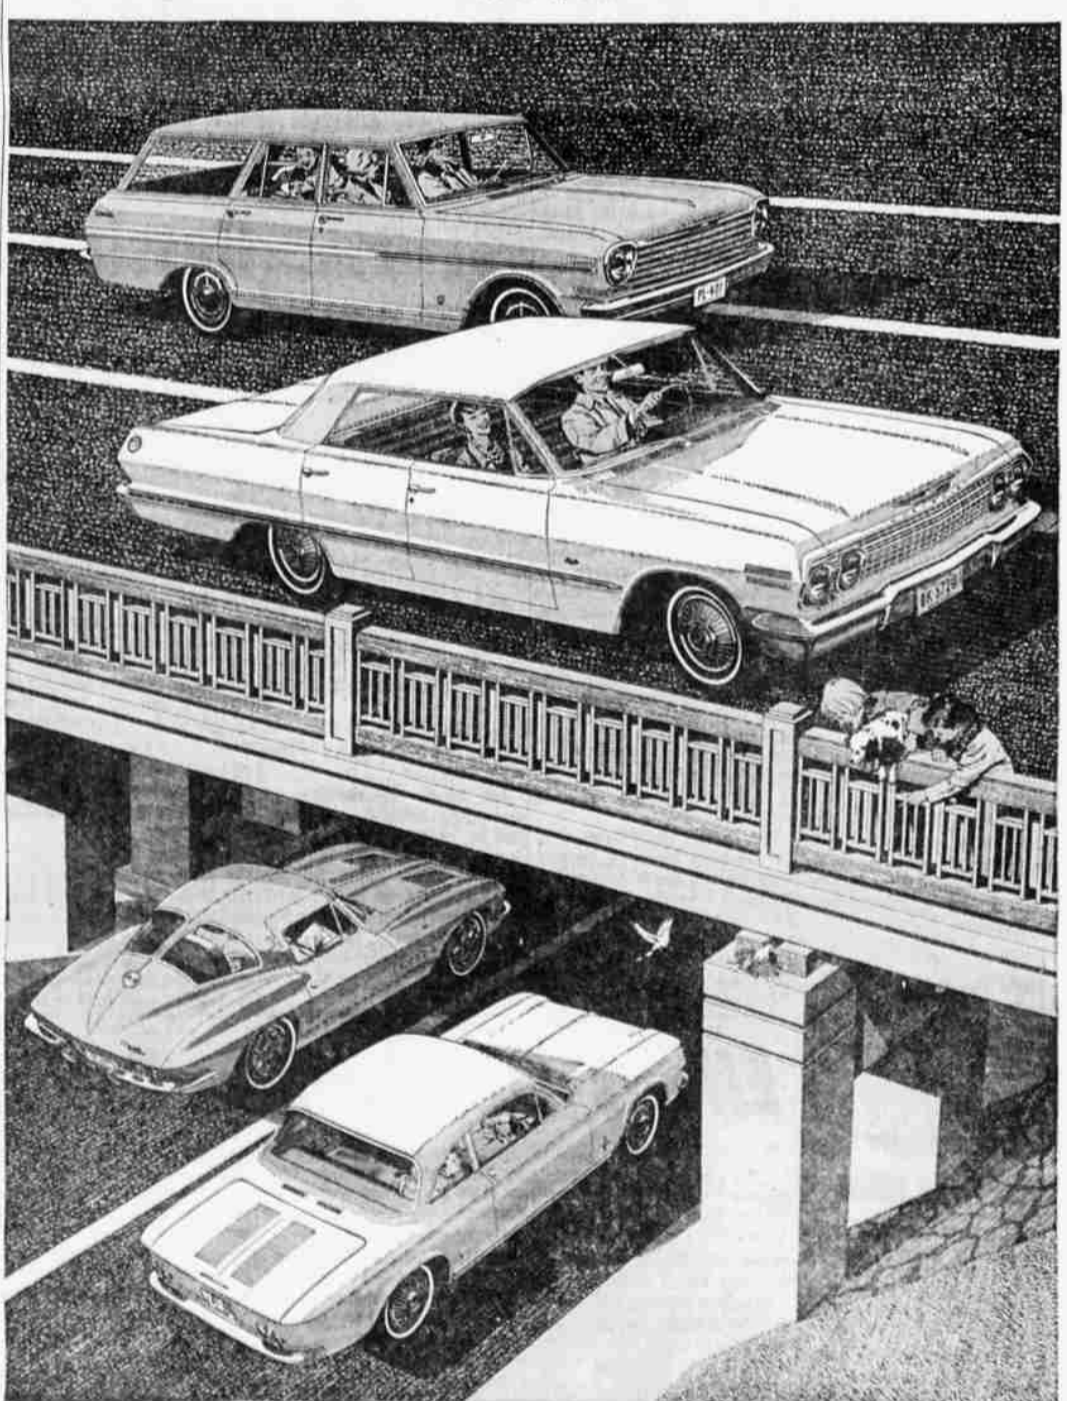

DUNSMUIR—The naming of an assistant police chief remained unsettled after Monday's meeting of the Dunsmuir City Council.

Five secret ballots were taken at the session, all identical. There were two votes for William Cooney, two for J. M. Kimsy, and one for Clifford Schwegler. The decision was tabled until the Feb. 4 meeting.

The council did vote to hire another police matron-clerk for a $200 monthly salary to facilitate the recently approved five-day week.
