South Must Use Clubs

By OSWALD JACOBY

Like yesterday, here is another hand where there are a number of ways to bid four spades. Some optimistic souls might even work their way to a slam, but they would have no way of bringing it home against the East and West holdings.

Four spades requires caution if South wants to make it.

He can count on nine easy tricks and his problem is the best way to gather in a tenth. Give East the ace of diamonds and he will have a cinch, but members of the Card School of New York have carefully placed that ace in the West hand.

The point of the play is that South must not draw the last trump until he has established at least one low club in dummy. Hence, South wins the opening heart, plays a club to dummy's ace, leads the three of spades to his own hand, leads a second club to dummy's king (this is to guard against the possibility that West started with only one club), ruffs a club with a high trump, ruffs a trump to dummy's nine, ruffs another club high, plays a trump to dummy's king, discards his small heart on dummy's last club, and leads a diamond to ward his king.

Of course, West captures that king with the ace and South will lose three diamonds, but the loss won't hurt him. He will make his contract.

INTERVIEW

Chiang Feels Indonesia Doomed Communistic

By MIMS THOMASON

United Press International

TAIPEI, Formosa (UPI)—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, 75, president of Nationalist China, feels Indonesia is doomed to become an all-out Communist state and will "cause more unrest and chaos in the Pacific area."

In an exclusive two and one-half hour interview with United Press International at his beach house on the southern coast of Formosa, the soldier-statesman said his armed forces are ready to "return" to the Chinese mainland and he believes his expeditionary force will be launched "sometime this year."

The president told UPI that he strongly favors Malaysia, the proposed confederation of Malaya with Singapore and three British states on the north coast of Borneo—Sarawak, Brunei, and North Borneo—as a safeguard against the spread of communism.

Chiang warned the United States and other Western countries they had better act fast to save Asia from the grasp of communism.

Referring to Indonesia, he said the power and influence of the Communists is not necessarily confined to the high levels of government but has reached the common masses of the people. He blames this on food shortages and declines in tin and rubber exports.

The president made a point of emphasizing that he has no intention of picking an arbitrary time and place for what he invariably refers to as a "return to the mainland" but will send his armed forces only after there has been an internal revolt in Red China.

"There is no solidarity of forces in Communist China," he said.

Fiscal Post Confuses Collegians

SALEM (UPI)—College students apparently were confused over the role of the legislative fiscal officer—but they were aware his recommendations suggested possible cuts in the state's higher education budget.

House Speaker Clarence Barton said a student asked him Thursday if he trusted the recommendations of Legislative Fiscal Officer Kenneth Bragg.

And Senate President Ben Musa said a student asked him if he felt Bragg had too much power. Students from 14 colleges, mostly in Oregon, are attending a legislative seminar here.

The seminar is to permit students of government to view the legislature in action.

Seminar Director Donald Balmor said "the hope is that the experience will lead the students to participate actively in political life after graduation, and to add to the effectiveness of the teaching done by their professors."

Barton and Musa addressed a luncheon meeting on the role of the presiding officer.

Barton said an Oregon State student expressed the view that the governor's proposed budget for higher education was "bad enough," and was curious what effect Bragg's recommendations of possible cuts in that budget might have.

Musa said, "apparently some of the students don't realize that the legislature hires Bragg to be its fiscal watchdog, and that his recommendations have already saved the state millions of dollars."

Barton said he asked the student, "what are they teaching you?"

Musa commented that the students approved the recent legislative pay hike as being "overdue."

Overly Neighborly Neighbor Burned Up

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: The people next door moved here from another state. We knocked ourselves out being friendly and helpful. I gave her the names of sitters, introduced her to my butcher, my seamstress, and my cleaning lady. I cut her in on my whole-sale connections and arranged for her children to get in a car pool. Just name it and I did it.

Since they didn't know anyone in town we invited them to our Saturday night club to meet our friends. We also brought them along to several other parties and launched them socially.

Now guess what has happened? They are having a few little parties of their own, inviting our friends, and leaving us out. Last night their house was ablaze with lights and we recognized the cars as they pulled up.

Do you feel I am justified in being burned over this? Should I come right out and tell her how I feel?—OVERDID IT

Dear B: It was mighty generous of you to open some doors for these people, but this doesn't mean you own them.

Your signature tells more than your letter. For next time, just remember that old adage—"Too thick—won't stick."

Dear Ann Landers: I'm considering marriage but am undecided. I want to write down the points for it and against it. Perhaps when I see it all on paper it will be clearer to me.

These are the points for: (1) He has had one lousy marriage (me too) so he is sympathetic rather than critical of me as a divorcee.

(2) He owns a good business and is financially secure.

(3) We've known each other for five years, have the same friends and enjoy the same things. We rarely quarrel.

(4) He likes my children and they like him.

These are the points against: (1) His table manners are poor and he has a partial plate which clicks when he eats.

(2) He smokes too much and has a constant cough. When I ask him to see a doctor, he says, "What for—I feel fine."

(3) He snores.

Thank you, Ann, for any help you can give me.—FENCE SITTING

Dear Sitting: Sorry I can't help much because I don't know to what extent his habits irritate you. Only you know this.

A dentist can do something for those clicking plates, but I'm afraid you'll have to live with the other complaints. If you marry him, accept the total package. Don't plan on doing a remodeling job because it won't work. (Incidentally, you aren't supposed to know he snores!)

Dear Ann Landers: My problem won't sound like much compared with others you receive, but it would mean a great deal to me if you would answer it.

I have been invited to attend church services with my boy friend and his family. I know when a gentleman attends services as a guest he is obliged to put an offering in the collection plate. But what about a lady? Does the lady guest contribute?

I have asked several of my friends about this but nobody seems to know the answer. Do you?—BAFFLED

Dear Baffled: It is purely a matter of choice and either choice is correct. If you are asking me to make the decision, I say ante up, Sister. It can't hurt and it may make you feel better.

HEADS DELEGATION
WASHINGTON (UPI)—The head of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, William C. Foster, will be in charge of the U.S. delegation at the opening sessions of Geneva disarmament talks scheduled to resume next Tuesday.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI)—The United States today fired its mightiest military missile, the 10-story Titan 2, more than 6,500 miles to its longest test success.

Thirty minutes after the firing the nose cone, largest ever carried by a U.S. rocket, slammed into a target area beyond Ascension Island, off the west coast of Africa.

The shot demonstrated the city-busting potential of the Titan 2. The nose cone is designed to carry a nuclear warhead with the equivalent destructive force of 10 million tons of TNT. It carried only test instruments today.

Power Stud' Bill Entered

SALEM (UPI)—Creation of a seven-member interim electric power committee was called for today in a bill introduced by Rep. Edward Whelan, D-Portland.

The bill would provide $100,000 to finance the study of power rates, utility lobbying, and the performance of the public utilities commissioner.

A bill by Kessler Cannon, R-Bend, would prevent most occupational licensing agencies from regulating advertising unless such authority is provided by statute.

The measure also would prohibit false or misleading advertising, and includes radio and television broadcasts in its provisions. Penalties for violations would be increased to a $1,000 fine or 90 days in the county jail.

A Senate Education Committee bill would add a school board member to the State Textbook Commission, and would assign to the Board of Education the final responsibility for textbook adoption.
