

Video Viewers Wowed By Cinderella Aspect Of George Bernard Shaw Play

SINGS IN PORTLAND—Shirley Verrett-Carter is scheduled to appear with the Portland Symphony Orchestra under Jacques Singer on Feb. 18 in the Civic Auditorium in Portland. Appearances are also slated for Salem and Tacoma.

Award-Winning Singer To Perform In Portland

"Shirley Verrett-Carter is good news." With this warm appraisal, New York's Herald-Tribune applauded the young mezzo-soprano's 1958 Town Hall debut. Oregonians will share the good news when Miss Verrett-Carter appears with the Portland Symphony Orchestra under Jacques Singer on Feb. 18 at the Civic Auditorium, to sing works by Verdi, de Falla, and Saint-Saens. (Note: The Portland orchestra and Miss Verrett-Carter will appear in Salem on Feb. 19 and in Tacoma on Feb. 26.)

In 1961, Miss Verrett-Carter climaxed five years of award winning (John Charles Thomas scholarship; Marian Anderson award; Berkshire scholarship; Walter W. Naumburg award) by taking first place in the National Federation of Music Clubs' competition... Tickets for this and all symphony concerts are available at 426 Park Building.

Gene Kelly Doing Good Job In 'Going My Way'

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Gene Kelly must be doing a good job as the parish priest in ABC-TV's "Going My Way" if the absence of parishioner protest is any guidepost. Kelly is playing the "Father O'Malley" role that Bing Crosby portrayed in "Going My Way" 18 years ago to win an Academy Award. Leo G. Carroll is the sometimes confused pastor made popular in the film by the late Barry Fitzgerald.

Since the show started last fall, Kelly says its popularity has been increasing and there have been no complaints from sensitive viewers of any religious persuasion. There always is concern in television network front offices as a series about religion is aired even though every attempt is made to be objective.

"There have been a couple of crank letters but I didn't read them," Kelly said. "They went to the producers office and I don't even know what they were about."

Shy From Controversy Kelly said the show about two Catholic priests stays away from any subject which could cause controversy either with members of that faith or another.

"The show is not a Catholic show, it's not aimed that way," Kelly said. "We have never had any problems with the Catholic church. We have a priest on the set who is our adviser. We ask him if we can get a priest embroiled in certain situations because we don't want to offend anybody. But that's the way it would be in making an Army picture, you would have an officer advising."

Kelly describes the two video priests as character types who could fit into almost any ecclesiastical situation. "These two priests could be rabbis or ministers," he said. "Their advice is common sense, not holier than thou. We don't deal with faith and morals, love thy neighbor is the closest we get to religion."

"Two Good Guys" "If anybody has any reservations about two priests on a television show they'd see that these are just two good guys who are doing good for everybody, not just Catholics."

Shy From Controversy Kelly said the show about two Catholic priests stays away from any subject which could cause controversy either with members of that faith or another.

More than one billion dollars will be spent for the repair of television sets this year according to an industry spokesman.

Has A Weakness

As almost always, Shaw's ideas preoccupied him more than his characters, and the main weakness of the play is his: Without convincingly showing us Liza's capability of rising to such fine qualities, he merely presents her transition, and there is little real warmth.

For television, however, the adaptation situation seemed virtually ideal. The length of the play fit almost like a glove into the 90-minute space, whereas the last "Hall of Fame" program, "Cyrano de Bergerac," a long work, was compressed uncomfortably at times.

By the way, if you're wondering whether the unresolved ending meant that Liza got Higgins, he assured she did not. Shaw, the anti-romantic, wrote a hilarious epilogue about social customs, explaining why Liza, instead, married a young jackass who loved her, and got her shop after all. It's six-five-and-even the audiences never believe it.

Program Conflict

There was a very annoying program conflict while "Pygmalion" was on Wednesday night. "CBS Reports" preempted by presenting a truly outstanding pictorial interview with West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer on his life and times. And it was a loss, both to the show and viewers, to have aired such a riveting coup at such an unfortunate time.

Except for some overlong animated editorial cartoons about Adenauer, which seemed out of tone with the massively impressive straightforwardness of the "CBS Reports," the portrait of the leader was impeccably done. He spoke with reporter Daniel Schorr, and often his words were used—employing an interpreter—over films of his Germany, past and present. His opposition to Hitler as mayor of Cologne; his year in a monastery to think over his life; his closeness with Charles de Gaulle, who offered him recognition when others did not—these facets were explored.

Though formidable, Adenauer exhibited warm wit and friendliness—as well as toughness. "I do not suffer, in general, from fear," he said.

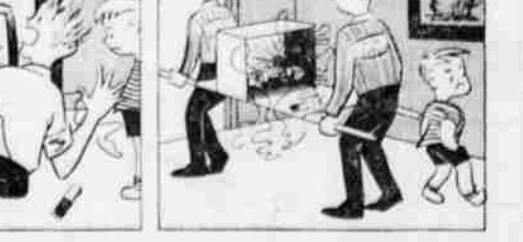

GLAMOUR UNDIMMED — Dolores Del Rio arrived in Hollywood 37 years ago from native Mexico for her first movie. This January Dolores again left her home for Hollywood to star in a television play, her beauty undimmed by the years.

Leave Fixing To Fixers — Good TV Rule

More than one billion dollars will be spent for the repair of television sets this year according to an industry spokesman. "The saddest part of the whole situation," says Arthur Forbes, distributor sales manager for Standard-Kollsman Industries, "is that the yearly TV repair bill could be greatly reduced with a little common sense."

Standard - Kollsman is the world's largest producer of television tuners. "Happily," says Forbes, "most of the trouble experienced by the 56-million American families owning television sets is not concerned with the tuner."

According to Forbes, the parts most frequently in need of repair are: the tubes, the filters, and the high voltage transformer.

Another obvious problem that adds dollars to a repair bill is also concerned with the do-it-yourself sort. More often than these types fancy themselves as skilled as those who spend their lives fixing radio and television sets. The truth is, says Forbes, "most of the repairs should be left to repairmen."
