

Republicans Rap Kennedy's Bungle Of Foreign Policy

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Republican party, using traditional Lincoln's Day dinner platforms Tuesday night, accused the Kennedy administration of neglecting civil rights, bungling foreign policy and ignoring the Cuban threat.

Democrats answered that Lincoln, the first GOP president, would scorn his party today and Republicans would not tolerate the great emancipator in their ranks now.

Ignoring GOP jibes, President and Mrs. Kennedy entertained 900 guests at a White House evening reception marking the 100th anniversary of the Emancipation Proclamation.

Prior to the reception, Kennedy received a report from the Civil Rights Commission on the past 100 years of progress by the Negro toward full civil rights.

The President said that all Americans, "particularly the American Negro," could "take satisfaction in this record despite the setbacks."

Among those invited to the buffet dinner were members of the Cabinet, Supreme Court and Congress, plus state and local civil rights leaders.

While the reception was taking place, Republicans around the country listened to party leaders attack the President and his administration.

Sen. Clifford P. Case, R-N.J., told a Springfield, N.J., dinner that the administration "failed to lift a finger" to help Senate efforts to tighten filibuster rules and make it easier to enact civil rights legislation.

The Republicans, Case said, have "spearheaded every major civil rights measure in the last century."

At a New York City dinner, Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., attacked Kennedy's dealing with U.S. allies, Kennedy's policies, Javits said, have given "grave signs of fumbling and insensitive leadership in foreign policy at a time when we can least afford it."

Javits said the administration had offended Britain in the Skybolt missile affair, and was unprepared to cope with the French President Charles de Gaulle's policy towards the Atlantic alliance.

Through "sheer clumsiness," he said, Kennedy had caused a rift in relations with Canada.

New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, speaking at the same dinner, charged that Kennedy "has abdicated virtually all leadership toward achieving necessary civil rights legislation."

Instead, Rockefeller said, the President "has settled for administrative actions of high publicity value" and let legislation to implement his 1960 campaign pledges on civil rights die on the vine.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., replied to GOP charges by saying the Republicans used "bad judgment" in attacking administration foreign policy. Such criticisms were made for political purposes, he said.

Rep. William G. Bray, R-Ind., attacked administration Cuban policies in a statement in the Congressional Record. He said Kennedy was doing nothing about "schools of sabotage, subversion and revolution" operating in Cuba to spread communism and revolt through Latin America.

The Civil Rights Commission's report to Kennedy said that the final battle for racial equality would be fought in the North against exclusive "gentleman's agreements" rather than in the South.

Entitled "Freedom to Free," the report reviewed civil rights progress since Lincoln issued his proclamation Jan. 1, 1863.

The "gentleman's agreement" which bars minority citizens from housing, employment restrictions, crowded neighborhood schools "are the subtler forms of denial and the more difficult to eliminate," the report said.

HOPES FOR NEW MARK
DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI)—Dan Gurney of Riverside, Calif., will drive an American Shelby AC Cobra Ford in the second running of the Daytona Continental at the International Speedway this Sunday.

Gurney, who won this event last year in a British Lotus 19 with an average speed of 103.644 miles per hour, said he hoped to break this mark over the 3.81 mile course.

MANCHESTER, Vt. (UPI)—Abraham Lincoln's great-granddaughter says she disagrees with Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy "in forcing integration on the South."

Miss Mary Lincoln Beckwith, 64, told United Press International Tuesday—the 154th anniversary of Lincoln's birth—that she was concerned about "the aggression of the federal government in forcing integration on the South."

"I disagree with the stand taken by Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy on this matter."

"We're southerners, but I don't think of the South as a separate culture. It is part of the Union," she said.

Miss Beckwith has lived more than 50 years at Hildene, a 1,000-acre dairy farm built by her grandfather, Robert Todd Lincoln. Her family had lived in Kentucky and South Carolina.

Things Are Different Since —

CAMBRIDGE, England (UPI)—Diand (Call Me Dilly) Thomas, 18, sees no reason to get excited because she and five other Cambridge girl students pose seminude in a play.

"I can't see what all the fuss is about, we are only naked from the waist up," Miss Thomas said Tuesday night before the opening performance.

The coed and her five partners are from the Cambridge College of Art and Technology.

They appear briefly in the college production of "expresso Bongo."

"Only people with nasty minds would object," the blonde Miss Thomas said.

The show opened to a full house and cheers.

Beforehand, the girls had to give a performance for the university proctor to see if the scene was in good taste.

Proctor Richard Bainbridge gave them the okay.

"Frankly, I prefer Shakespeare," he commented.

Giant Balloon Launch Stalled

PALESTINE, Tex. (UPI)—Strong high-altitude winds forced the fifth postponement of today's scheduled giant tandem balloon launching for a study of Mars.

The balloons launching was tentatively rescheduled for Thursday afternoon.

Princeton University scientists plan to send the 660-foot-tall package and its delicate photographic equipment and 36-inch telescope to 30,000 feet.

Governor's Airplane Sparks Protest From Assemblyman

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—A Republican Assemblyman and Gov. Edmund G. Brown's finance director exchanged words Tuesday over the need for a new gubernatorial airplane.

Assemblyman Don Mulford, R-Piedmont, lower chamber GOP caucus chairman, was the first to mention the matter. He brought it up in a letter to Finance Director Hale Champion.

The lawmaker pointed out that Brown invited the legislators to delete all expenditures in California's $3.2 billion budget that do not provide direct and necessary services to the people.

Then he mentioned the airplane item which says simply: "Provision is made for acquiring an executive airplane to be operated in conjunction with the automobile pool."

"Since this item is buried so obscurely in a subsection on state garages and since there is absolutely no explanation for the need or the reason for the inclusion of this item," said Mulford, "it is difficult to assist the governor with his invitation to look for economies in connection with this item."

Mulford conceded that it is "entirely possible" that the purchase is "both necessary and desirable," but added: "One can only speculate in the complete absence of any justification or estimate of the costs involved."

Champion answered right back. He said the plane was needed to replace the "grizzly bear," a National Guard DC6 now used by Brown on state business.

This is the same type of plane in which Montana Gov. Donald Nutter was killed a year ago on a flight between Helena and Great Falls, Mont. Subsequently, the Air National Guard ordered all the governor's planes grounded until they looked them over.

They replaced a wing attach angle on the Grizzly and pronounced it fit for use. Champion said that although the old aircraft originally were scheduled to be "phased out" in 1960 their life has been extended indefinitely.

Champion said the new aircraft would be a used Convair 240 estimated to cost $175,000 to purchase and $225,000 to convert the cabin and interior for the governor's use.

"It also would be used by other state executives," said Champion. "But the governor would have first call on it."

He estimated the plane would cost $175,000 annually to operate and would be piloted by the Air National Guard under the same arrangement provided for the Grizzly.

About Mulford's charge that the item was buried on Page 1045 of the 1200-page budget, Champion said: "This is exactly the way we handle all state equipment. There was no attempt at concealment."

Other developments in the legislature:

Arrests—Sen. Robert J. Lagomarsino, R-Ventura, introduced a bill to allow arrest at night on a warrant for misdemeanors when the person to be arrested is in a public place. He also introduced a measure to allow a person to be sentenced in the county of arrest or residence on warrants issued by other counties.
