'Drop-Out' Plan Urged

SALEM (UPI)—A special program for the unmanageable and unemployable high school drop-out was urged here Tuesday at a meeting of the Senate Committee on Education.

The committee was asked to approve a $100,000 pilot program to experiment with special ways of handling young men and women who can't or won't complete high school—estimated at 5 to 20 per cent of the school population.

Lloyd Purdy of the Friendly House in Portland said 200 to 300 interviews gave this picture of the problem drop-out: He wants a car and a job, he has no skills and no idea of what is required in working, he is semi-literate, resentful, and "incapable of coming up to life's problems without guidance."

Suggestions of programs that might help ranged from job training to spotting and counseling of the potential drop-out.

Labor Commissioner Norman Nielsen said nearly all employers today are looking for at least a high school diploma.
