Prior Users Top Grazing Land List

Livestock operators who qualify as new national forest grazing permittees on former reservation lands have been selected on the basis of their prior use of the range. This was the announcement made by supervisors of the Fremont and Winema national forests.

Since 1961, when portions of the reservation were transferred to national forest administration, grazing permits have been granted on a temporary basis and permittees who used the range in 1960 have been granted range use in 1961 and 1962.

Applications for preference type permits were received in September 1962. Approval has been granted to applicants who regularly used the range for two consecutive years immediately prior to the time that these lands became national forest. Applying this locally, it means that operators must have used the range under 1960.

Letters have been mailed to all livestock operators who applied advising them of the action taken.

The selection of range users at this time is to determine those who qualify as "prior users" without reference to the numbers of livestock that can be run on the range. The permits issued will continue to be temporary and the number of livestock allowed each year will be subject to adjustment until the numbers of cattle and sheep using the range are brought into balance with the available forage.

The selection of "prior user" permittees is another important step in placing the former Klamath Indian Reservation lands under national forest administration.

THE DOCTOR SAYS Chest Symptoms Require Checkup

By W. G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.
 Written for Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Q—A am a woman of 35. On several occasions I have spit up a small amount of blood, although I seldom have a cold. My chest X-ray was reported as showing slight scarring in the lungs and I was told to have an X-ray every six months. Is there any cause for alarm?

A—You should see your doctor without delay. He can test your sputum chemically for amounts of blood too small to be seen. The blood could be coming from your gums, nose or lungs. In any case, the source should be determined so that appropriate treatment can be given.

Q—If you are allergic to ink, what are the symptoms? I use a stamp pad six days a week.

A—The usual symptoms would be redness and itching of the skin at the point of contact. In order to prove a cause-and-effect relationship, your doctor should make a patch test.

Many years ago I saw a patient who had a most baffling condition. Every Monday he developed an acute eczema of both hands, with severe itching and a watery discharge from the affected skin. This would clear up by Friday, only to reappear the next Monday.

A skin specialist studied this man and made many patch tests, but could not discover the cause. Finally, he went to the man's home early one Sunday morning and stayed with him all day, taking note of anything the man

Water Shortage Seen For Lake County Land

LAKEVIEW — The 1963 spring and summer streamflow in Lake County will be greatly below average and most irrigated lands will experience "short" water supplies, according to the report of W. T. Frost and Bob L. Whaley of the Soil Conservation Service.

The mountain snowpack is the shortest ever measured in this region since the beginning of snow surveys 35 years ago. Water content of the snow is only three per cent of the average for Feb. 1. Measurable snow was present on only seven out of 17 snow courses.

The soil moisture report shows that soils in the upper watersheds have been adequately recharged and moisture content is now up to 85 per cent of the total capacity.

Storage in Drews Valley reservoir has reached 23,000 acre feet as of Feb. 1 and a good inflow has been received during the first few days of February. Last year only 800 acre feet were held in storage. Cottonwood now has better than 1,700 acre feet. Expected inflow to these reservoirs will be very limited and total supply will barely equal the amount required for satisfactory irrigation this season.

The streamflow in Lake County will be extremely short this irrigation season. In general, the streams will produce about equal to the 1959 flows. Drews reservoir inflow is forecast at 15,000 acre feet or 32 per cent average for the March-July period. The Chewaucan River is forecast at 40,000 acre feet for March-June or 43 per cent of the average (1943-57). Water Valley water supplies are dependent upon several streams including Deep Creek which is forecast to flow 35,000 acre feet or 42 per cent March through June. Twenty-mile Creek and Honey Creek are expected to flow 10,000 acre feet and 8,000 acre feet respectively for the same period.

The above forecasts are made on the assumption that snowfall between now and April 1 will be normal.

50-Mile Craze

MOUNT SHASTA—The 50-mile craze hit the Shasta Ski Bowl Friday, with all 50 miles being covered on skis and downhill. Nine skiers rode the chairlift to the top ramp 25 times to ski the two miles back to the lodge. In a time conserving move, all meals were served to the crew on their ride up.

The stunt began at 8 a.m. By noon more than half the trips were covered, and the finish slated for about 3 p.m.

Those making the trips were Dick Gaso, Curt Barnes, Bob Simon, and Pat Murdoch, all of Mount Shasta. Out-of-towners were Don Haagstrom, Redding; Kjell Skaar, Norway; Bruce Brown, San Jose; Walter Beck, San Jose, and Rich Lyman of Heavenly Valley.

Storm Damaged Timber Sales Total 175 M Feet

One hundred seventy-five million board feet of timber blown down in the Columbus Day windstorm has been sold in 294 sales on the national forests of Oregon and Washington, according to J. Herbert Stone, regional forester, U.S. Forest Service.

"Good progress is reported in all the national forests hit by the storm," Stone said.

The Siuslaw National Forest, which incurred the most blowdown, has sold 83 million feet in 113 sales, and 61 more sales involving 124 million feet will be made by the end of March. Siuslaw National Forest Supervisor S. T. Moore plans to sell nearly all the concentrated blowdown by July 1, except for 150-200 million board feet in remote areas such as between the Smith and Umpqua rivers. Plans have been made to construct access roads, with appropriated money, into the area in order to make salvage economically feasible.

Sales volumes do not include timber incorporated into existing sales through regular adjustment procedures, Stone said.

Funds Asked For Probers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chairman Adam C. Powell has proposed spending $202,000 in the next two years on a House Education and Labor Committee "investigative task force" under his personal direction.

The New York Democrat's request for the special eight-member group is part of his total 1963-64 budget request of $887,000 submitted to the House Administration Committee. Other funds available to Powell could push his committee spending in this session over $1 million.
