Abortion Case Rule Approved

SALEM (UPI) — The Oregon Supreme Court upheld the State Board of Medical Examiners Wednesday in revoking the license of a doctor charged with giving drugs to two women for purposes of abortion.

The high court said the board was warranted, on the basis of testimony from the two women, in finding Dr. Harold Mintz guilty of violating medical ethics.

The Supreme Court opinion, written by Justice Kenneth O'Connell, reversed a Multnomah County decision.

The lower court had ordered the board to reinstate the license on grounds the board's rules failed to define professional misconduct sufficiently enough to specify the charges against the doctor.

The lower court also said the doctor was charged only with administering drugs, and thus with a mere offer or attempt to commit abortion, rather than with actually procuring an abortion.

The high court replied that the term "unprofessional conduct" is an adequate standard. It said the statute is supposed to be broad because of the impossibility of cataloging all the various possible types of professional misconduct.

In another case, the Supreme Court affirmed Judge Ralph Holman in a case involving a teenage girl who suffered head and neck injuries when she dove into a shallow pool at Jantzen Beach.

The judge, overthrowing a jury, had refused damages to the girl on grounds the pool was adequately posted with "shallow pool" signs.

Assassination Plot Probed

PARIS (UPI) — Security forces were reported on the track today of a possible new plot to assassinate President Charles de Gaulle.

Five rifles, two with telescopic sights, were stolen Tuesday from a gun shop in Poitiers, 60 miles southwest of Paris.

The weapons were similar to those obtained by the gang that planned to shoot De Gaulle when he visited a military school near the Eiffel Tower last Friday.

Informed sources said the guns may have been stolen to prepare for a new attempt against the president. He already has escaped at least eight death plots since his return to power in May, 1958.

SHASTA CRASH — Members of the Shasta Ski Bowl Ski Patrol remove the two bodies from the wreckage of a light plane to a snow tractor that climbed the side of Mt. Shasta where the plane crashed late Monday. Killed in the crash was David Belcher of Gordon Valley, Calif., pilot of the plane, and his passenger, Air Force Lt. Michael Gooch, on leave from Yokota Air Base, Japan. Rescue operations took place early Wednesday. — UPI Telephoto

Legislators Admit Fiscal Chief Saves State Millions

By ZAN STARK
United Press International

SALEM (UPI)—Kenneth Bragg has become one of the most respected men in state government.

Legislators admit that Bragg and his legislative fiscal staff have already saved the state millions of dollars.

Senate President Ben Musa, D-The Dalles, said "if we doubled the fiscal office appropriation the state would save 100 times the added appropriation."

Bragg is the fiscal watchdog of Oregon.

It's a relatively new position, a creation of the 1959 legislature.

Bragg heads a staff of eight. There are four analysts, William E. Bass Jr., Cleighton Penwell, Fred Leutwyler, Eldon S. Greaves, and secretaries Lee Dillon, Zora Gostovich and Hiroko Ishida.

They are housed in offices on the fourth floor of the statehouse, and operate on a budget of about $85,000 a year.

They analyze and make recommendations to the legislature on revenue and spending proposals and review the operation of state agencies.

They look at the governor's budget from the legislature's point of view, for the office is a branch of the legislature and is not connected with the governor's office.

The state's serious financial trouble has focused attention on Bragg's Committee.

When the governor submitted his $405 million general fund budget last December, Bragg's staff reviewed both the spending and revenue-raising proposals.

The review contained what Bragg termed "basic fiscal facts."

—The state has used $50 million in reserves in the past six years—$33 million in the past two years—and the reserves are now gone.

—Requested expenditures are up $68.5 million over the 1961-63 biennium.

—Revenues for 1961-63 are $16.5 million less than expected.

—Tax planning should consider a possible $70 million hike in the general fund budget for 1965-67 over 1963-65.

Personal income tax revenues for 1961-63 are $21.7 million below estimates.

Education, which gobbles up almost 60 per cent of the state's general fund budget, has received a lot of attention from Bragg's office.

Bragg recommended elimination of the basic school support fund and use of the school census as a basis for determining grants to schools. School money, he said, should be handled the same way as higher education support, by biennial appropriations.

"Specially protected money pockets within the state general fund are not conducive to good fiscal management," he said.

His review of other functions of government have been equally critical.
