

OFFICERS AND PLANNERS — Klamath County Dairy Wives lunched at the Willard Hotel Feb. 25 to discuss plans for the 1963 Dairy Princess Contest for Klamath County. The contest is open to unmarried high school senior girls between the ages of 16 and 23 with a dairy family background. The winner will receive a $150 wardrobe and numerous other gifts also goes to state competition. Eligible girls are urged to enter by calling the Klamath County Farm Bureau, TU 2-3921. Among those present for the luncheon were, left to right, Ellen Hobson, vice president; Martha Masten, alternate voting delegate; Pat Masten, president; Eleanor Grant, publicity; Charleen Reiling, voting delegate, and Martha Wenz, secretary-treasurer.

Woodworker Convention Asks 40 Cent Pay Hike

PORTLAND (UPI) — The Western States Council of the International Woodworkers of America adopted a three-point bargaining program calling for wage increases of 40 cents an hour Tuesday in the opening session of a four-day convention.

The 35,000-member lumber union represents workers in Alaska, Washington, Oregon, Northern California, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming and Colorado.

Its contracts with lumber producers expire June 1.

The union decided to demand these items:

- A general wage increase of 40 cents an hour spread out over a three-year contract, plus additional pay increases in some skilled job classifications.
- Revisions of pension plans with several employers.
- Travel pay for logging crews.

Bar Rapped For Stand On Revision

SA'LEM (UPI) — The Oregon State Bar was admonished by members of the House and Senate committees on Constitutional Revision Tuesday for giving explanations but not any opinions on a proposed new state constitution.

The bar is on record as urging delay of legislative action on the document for two years.

Two more witnesses from the bar appeared Tuesday to analyze sections of the new document. They noted the bar had not taken any stand on the sections under discussion.

"I couldn't care less" about the bar's explanations, said Sen. Al Fiegel, D-Roseburg.

The committee already has spent a month in briefings on what the new constitution would do, Sen. Walter Pearson, D-Portland, said. He said now the committee wants to know what people think about it.

The bar was told that opinions of individual members would be appreciated, and would not be construed as representing the entire bar.

Sections on legislative reapportionment drew praise from witnesses for the Oregon Civil Liberties Union and the League of Women Voters.

They said Oregon already leads the nation in apportioning legislative seats on a "one man, one vote" principle, and the proposed constitution would be an improvement over the present one.

Public School Prayer Hits High Court Again

By CHARLOTTE G. MOULTON
United Press International
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court today takes another look at prayer in the public schools, an issue that loosed a torrent of criticism on the justices last June.

At that time, the court ruled out use of a 22-word non-denominational prayer composed by New York state officials for schools that cared to use it.

Today, the issue was the Lord's Prayer—and Bible-reading as well. Arguments were scheduled in cases from Baltimore and Philadelphia.

The arguments were scheduled for 11:30 a.m. EST.

The decisions, not expected for some weeks, may well trigger an even more violent emotional outburst than did the New York opinion, if the rationale of the court's reasoning is the same.

In that case, Justice Hugo L. Black found the use of the prayer ran counter to that part of the Constitution's First Amendment which says: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion."

Rearing Son As Atheist.

The Baltimore case stems from a 1965 rule of the Board of School Commissioners providing for reading the Bible and/or recitation of the Lord's Prayer without comment. In 1960, the board added that pupils who objected could be excused.

The lawsuit was started by Mrs. Madalyn E. Murray, who is rearing her son, William Murray III, as an atheist.

Citing the New York case, Mrs. Murray contends:

- Use of the Lord's Prayer favors Christians over Jews and other non-Christians.
- The Bible is also sectarian and various Christian sects accept a different version. It is not accepted at all by others, for example Buddhists, of whom there are about 100,000 in Hawaii.
- A child who asks to be excused will reap disapproval from teachers and classmates.

Mrs. Murray made it clear she did not object to discussion of the Bible as literature or history.

The Maryland Court of Appeals upheld the constitutionality of the school board rule last April.

Unitarians File Suit

The Philadelphia case, which has been in and out of court since 1959, was started by a Unitarian couple, Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Schenpp, who have two children in the Abington Township schools. They object to a state law requiring that 10 verses of the Bible be read without comment at the opening of each school day.

The practice is to follow the reading of the King James Version with the Lord's Prayer, although the statute does not mention the prayer.

The Schenpps' arguments generally parallel those of Mrs. Murray.

A special three-judge federal court found the program unconstitutional about a year ago and ordered it discontinued. The order has not been enforced pending the result of the Supreme Court appeal.

In last year's New York case Black said the government "should stay out of the business of writing or sanctioning official prayers."

The opinion said "government is without power to prescribe by law any particular form of prayer which is to be used as an official prayer in carrying on any program of governmentally sponsored religious activity."

Say Cases Differ

School authorities contend that today's cases differ from New York's in two ways: first, the prayer is not state-proposed; and second, the opening exercises are not really religious devotions.

Baltimore City Solicitor Francis B. Burch said the exercises have long since outgrown their "purely religious origins." The idea is to have "a sobering and morally beneficial exercise" to start the school day, he explained in his brief filed with the Supreme Court.

SHIRLEY HANSEN SANDY MEISNER

Lakeview Elks Award Scholarships To Pair

LAKEVIEW — Shirley Hansen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hansen of Lakeview, and Sandy Meisner, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Meisner of Lakeview, were the winners in the local division of the Elks scholarship contest conducted here last week, Exalted Ruler Rodney Harlan announced.

The other six students involved in the competition here were Janice Decker, Janet Faris, Nancy Lantz, Carl Coscorrosa, John Moran, and Larry Flynn.

Shirley and Sandy each received cash prizes of $50 and will be entered in the district competition in Bend on March 3.

Dward Bell is the chairman of the contest for the Lakeview Lodge, and he and Mrs. Bell will leave for Bend Saturday to take the brochures of the contestants. They will be joined there by the two students for the interviews on Sunday.

The entries are judged on a basis of 100 points total; 60 maximum for grade point average, 10 for extra curricular activities in and out of school, 10 on personality and leadership, 10 on perseverance and resourcefulness, and 10 on financial need. The winners are determined by an average of points submitted by the judges.

PORTLAND (UPI) — Some residents in the Portland area felt a light earthquake at 3:22 p.m. Tuesday. No damage was reported.

Dr. Peter Dellinger of Oregon State University said the tremor showed up on his seismograph. He called it a "very small" shock and said it apparently centered in the Portland area.
