Princess Margaret Likes Tony's Advice On Fashion

LONDON (UPI) — Princess Margaret believes in asking her husband, former society photographer Lord Snowdon, for advice on what fashions she should wear. "Tony can tell me what's best photographically," said the princess, who is inevitably followed by the cameras whenever she appears in public. But she does not necessarily follow everything he suggests, according to friends.
She is already planning a wardrobe for the brilliant functions and parties that start after Easter, centered around Princess Alexandra's wedding in April to businessman Angus Ogilvy and the state visit of King Baudouin and Queen Fabiola of the Belgians in May.
Princess Margaret always makes sketches of her ideas, cuts out glossy magazine photos and collects fabric patterns to help her visualize what a dress or coat is going to look like. She then discusses her notions with Lord Snowdon.
The royal couple's visit to Paris in March is to open the Hertford Hospital and attend its ball. But the princess, keenly interested in Paris fashions, will probably see some clothes as well.
After returning from Paris, the couple had hoped to move into their new house at Kensington Palace during the quiet pre-Easter weeks when the royal family undertakes few public engagements because of Lent.
But the recent fire in the upper story of the palace and the present freezing weather means work on the building may not be finished in time.
It is impossible to entertain in the couple's present small apartment at the palace, where six chairs in the dining room are a squeeze. In the dining room in the new house the princess plans to place a long antique walnut table with 20 chairs, one of her wedding gifts from the royal family.
The princess has not given up hope of becoming a leading hostess this spring. Almost every day she goes out in knee-boots, a heavy coat and scarf to see the progress of the reconstruction and encourage the builders.
If the present cold weather lets up, outside work can be speeded up and the interior then completed.

NEWLYWEDS VISIT — Mr. and Mrs. Douglas K. Pence of Los Angeles, who were married in Las Vegas on Feb. 8, spent the past few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas W. Pence of this city. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Korn, Los Angeles. The bridegroom, graduate of KUHS, attended University of Oregon and University of Colorado. He is presently employed in Los Angeles where they will make their home.

Put Beads On Parade

POLLY CRAMER
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

DEAR POLLY — To restring beads easily, line them up (in order) on the sticky side of a strip of cellophane tape. It is a great help in stringing beads of graduated sizes.
To check the correct position for a button before sewing it on, use a fine hairpin to hold it to the garment. Pass the end of the hairpin through the holes in the button and through the fabric. Bend over the ends. They are easily adjusted.

DEAR POLLY—I wanted a 46-inch wide towel rack under the window in our bathroom but could not find one in regular bathroom fixtures. An anodized aluminum cafe curtain rod works beautifully.
MRS. P.D.R. JR.
GIRLS—A big curtain rod is very good to use on the back of a closet door to hold an extra blanket or comforter not kept on the bed all the time.

DEAR POLLY — Painting the basement floor is much less work if the paint is applied with a paint roller fastened to a mop handle. With this method, the job can be done standing upright instead of in a kneeling position, and goes faster, too.
Pouring coffee from a newly opened can into a canister usually results in some spillage. The spilled coffee is difficult to wipe up and will grind annoyingly underfoot on linoleum. Wrapping a paper towel around the can will overcome this spilling problem.

DEAR POLLY—We had an old piano bench no longer needed as

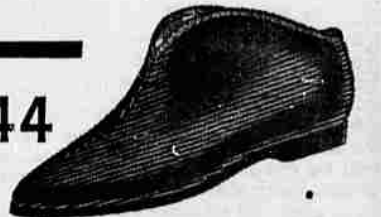

NEW TWIST IN PEARLS — Cultured pearls go to all lengths to attain the new opulent look. About two and one-half yards of large baroque cultured pearls are twisted into this unusual necklace, left, and caught at the front with gold rose pin. The multi-strand necklace of small pearls, right, is traditional white, combined with golden yellow. Added touch to the new opulent approach is the spray of pearls set in gold.
