The vehicles collided nearly head-on near the middle of the highway and veered off the pavement into a field on the east side of the road. The body of Mrs. Wolff (center, under blanket) was removed to Ward's Klamath Funeral Home where funeral arrangements are pending. Silver was taken by Chiloquin ambulance to the Klamath Valley Hospital where he was listed in good condition early Friday. New Soviet Air Tactic Revealed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Soviet Union appeared today to be on a new harassment campaign with huge Red air force turboprop planes buzzing American aircraft carriers far out in the Atlantic and Pacific.

After a lengthy silence, Washington now has revealed how reconnaissance versions of the Russian Bear bomber are dispatched on over-water flights of several thousand miles to ferret out American fleet units.

Previously the Soviets confined themselves to scouting U.S. ships that were within a few hundred miles of shore and could be reached by comparatively short-range aircraft of the twin jet Badger bomber type.

Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara disclosed details at a news conference Thursday of Russian flights over U.S. carriers from Jan. 27 to Feb. 22. They occurred in both oceans and represented "a rather substantial addition" to previous Red aerial inspection activities, he said. They showed no "hostile intent."

McNamara said there had been no Soviet air reconnaissance of North America. But the performance of the four Bear aircraft last Friday demonstrated, as experts already knew, that the turboprop planes in service since 1954 have ample range to scout these shores.

On that occasion, four Bears flew over the 59,000 ton carrier Forrestal southeast of the Azores as it steamed homeward from a tour with the 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean. They flew in pairs, separated by a two hour interval. Each time, one plane stayed at 30,000 feet while the other swooped under a 2,000 foot overcast to inspect the flattop.

McNamara's report indicated that the Bears must have flown a roundtrip of more than 7,000 nautical miles. He told how U.S. Air Force F102 jet interceptors went aloft from Iceland to follow the four-engined planes. That indicated the Bears flew south from Soviet Arctic bases and may have been detected by radar in northern Norway as well as Iceland.

The Forrestal launched F4B Phantom jets to trail the first two Bears northward for 150 miles. Then the F102s took over again. Phantoms "escorted" the second flight while over the Forrestal.

Although Russia has often protested American overflights of Soviet ships on the high seas, McNamara said the Bears had a "legal right" to be in the air over international waters.

Chies Other Flights — He said other flights were made over the nuclear powered carrier Enterprise in the North Atlantic Feb. 12 and 13, the Kitty Hawk in the North Pacific between Jan. 27 and Feb. 3, and the Princeton in the North Pacific between Feb. 13 and 16.

McNamara was asked why the announcement was "saved" for him to make at a news conference. He said information came in gradually and was studied to see whether it formed a pattern. It was "in the interest of the public to be informed." He did not want the information to come out later and then have to explain why he did not announce it.

The argument hinged on the issue of the sovereign immunity of the state against suit. Asst. Atty. Gen. Collas Marster argued that only the legislature has the power to grant authority for a suit against the state.

Attorney Donald S. Richardson, who is representing the union of officials, countered that the suit was one to force the three members of the state board of control to abide by a statute which restricts the use of inmate labor to that which would not compete with free labor.

A decision by the three-judge panel is expected in a few days. Trial of the suit has been set for March 12.
