

Cattlemen Lauded At Rotary Club Luncheon

Klamath County and area cattlemen heard themselves called "rugged individualists" and the type of person "who asks for little and gives little" in their business operations at a Rotary Club luncheon meeting Friday.

The cattlemen were guests of Rotary, and the reference came from Lyle S. Hoyt, secretary-manager of the Western States Angus Association, Hoyt, from Lodi, Calif., manages the affairs of the Angus group in 11 Western states, including Oregon.

"Agriculture, and particularly the beef industry, is big business, and a constantly changing business," Hoyt said. "Although changes are not as rapid, and as automatic as they are in other types of business, we have undergone many revolutionary changes just in the past 20 years," he added.

As evidence of the changing scene in the cattle and beef business, Hoyt referred to a February, 1953, issue of Western Stock Grower. Stories and advertisements in the magazine emphasized these changes, the speaker noted. He pointed out changes in feeding and breeding practices and care of livestock as significant.

Hoyt predicted that on the basis of projected statistics, Black Angus cattle will be the predominant breed in the United States by 1970.

"I am glad to be a cattlemen for two particular reasons," Hoyt

MERRILL — The Oregon Washington Telephone Company is filing with the Oregon Public Utility commissioner for a combined rate increase and adjustment in its operating areas. E. R. Dean, president of the company, stated. This rate request will affect the California patrons of the company in Tulare and Newell where the company is known as the California-Oregon Telephone Company.

The new rates would increase the company's revenue 5.63 percent annually.

This increase is necessary to bring the company rate of return to a more reasonable level which will support the added investment, increased taxes, and other operating expenses and permit the company to obtain finance for future improvements and expansion.

Dean indicated that in spite of steadily rising costs, the company has had no advance in rates since 1951. The Oregon Washington Telephone Company, whose home office is in Hood River, serves 25 exchanges in Oregon with a total of 15,707 telephones.

In the southern part of the Klamath Basin, the company serves Merrill, Malin, Bonanza, Olena, Dairy and Lorella.

At a federation meeting, later in Springfield, delegates from the 10 areas, of the federation, approved use of the flooring, which is made in Albany, for this summer's Fair West Square Dance convention.

This convention, which is expected to draw an attendance of 10,000 persons, to be Oregon's largest, will be Aug. 15-17. The conventioners are slated to dance on an outdoor floor, also of chipboard, which will be laid at the University of Oregon. A large number of local square dancers will attend.

This floor will measure nearly 128,000 square feet and will be designed to accommodate over 9,700 square dancers.

Plans for the big convention are coming along very well, it is reported. Registrations are already being made for the affair and 12 "name" callers have been signed up for the three major dances on the program.

The next federation meeting will be in Astoria in May and selection of the site for next year's state festival will be made at that meeting.

MRS. HENRY WOLFF

CHAMBER COMMENTS

by GEORGE T. CALLISON
Manager
KLAMATH COUNTY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

It has been said scores of times before. It will be said hundreds of times more, but never once too often: "Investigate before you invest."

This admonition has special significance in the spring and fall of the year when itinerant salesmen, engaged in the "home improvement racket," are most active.

It is at this time of the year that the chamber of commerce receives its greatest number of inquiries and complaints from Klamath County home owners who want to know if the deal which they are contemplating or, in too many cases, have already entered into, is legitimate.

Therefore the warning to investigate first, because nine times out of 10, if you have already invested, it is too late, and the best you can hope for is inferior merchandise or shoddy workmanship, or both.

Once again, this is not intended as a blanket indictment of all itinerant salesmen or home repair crews. Many of them offer service and merchandise that is entirely acceptable. Some of them—the so-called "suede shoe" salesmen—don't. And they are relatively easy to recognize by their sales tactics.

His pitch is that he is a representative of the manufacturer whereas, in fact, he probably is neither a representative nor an employee of the manufacturer; but is a free-lance salesman. He says he is not a salesman, but is merely trying to induce favorable word-of-mouth advertising in the area. Actually, he is a salesman engaged in direct selling for the purpose of inducing an immediate purchase. He will tell you he has an easy way for you to make money; it is not. The "suede shoe" salesman will tell you you can acquire his product without cost; or without cost except for a small down payment. In fact, no one acquires the unit without cost and relatively few, if any, purchaser-participants ever acquire their units without making substantial additional payments. The pitch is that by referring a minimum of one lead per month, the purchaser will experience little or no difficulty in earning enough to offset the monthly installment payments, and with additional leads can easily earn considerably in excess of the installment payments. The fact is in the overwhelming majority of cases, purchaser-participants do not offset their installment obligations by lead referral earnings. Furthermore, many of those whose lead referral earnings offset some of their monthly payments do so only after expending much more time and effort than was represented.

And finally, this type of salesman will offer a "free" gift or in the case of something like a water softening unit, a lifetime supply of soap, perhaps. As it turns out, the gift, if received at all, will probably be a cheap substitute for the item promised, and the lifetime supply of soap will be one or two boxes.

As soon as the sale is made, the note is assigned to a bank or other financial institution for cash. Just as quickly as the area has been "taken," the salesman moves on, and there is little comfort in the Better Business Bureau revelation that the home office address given by the salesman is a vacant warehouse in some distant city.

Does it make a little more sense now to investigate before you invest?

At the council hearing, the council was represented by three sportsmen other than Milhorn. They were Erin Forrest, president of the Modoc County Protective Association; Lawrence Horton, Poe Valley rancher; and Ralph Renner, Lake County rancher, and former members of the State Game Commission.

Dr. John Walsh, Portland, advised Milhorn that he had obtained signatures of 700 sportsmen in Multnomah County who would form the nucleus of a chapter in that county. The council is currently represented in Jackson, Josephine, Douglas, Klamath, Lane and Deschutes counties.
