False-Card Play Pays

My partner's jump to three no-trump was eminently correct. He only had nine high card points, but his fifth club represented a probable trick and could be counted as the equivalent of at least one high card point.

Anti-Pollution Problem Studied By State, Industry

SALEM (UPI) — Industry and the State Sanitary Authority (SSA) agreed today on the need for summary abatement of flagrant pollution, but they disagreed on the anti-pollution powers local governments should have.

Local Control Possible

The SSA replied that local governments could control such areas as space heating and trash burning where it is hard for the SSA to reach. It said local units could supplement the state controls.

Anti-Pollution Problem Studied By State, Industry

SALEM (UPI) — Industry and the State Sanitary Authority (SSA) agreed today on the need for summary abatement of flagrant pollution, but they disagreed on the anti-pollution powers local governments should have.

The issues are at the core of a bill before the Senate Local Government Committee.

One part of the bill would let the SSA seek a court injunction against a polluter without going through the normal lengthy hearing procedures that can drag out for months.

The other part would let cities and counties enact anti-pollution ordinances and would let local government units contract with each other for area-wide programs.

Groups In Agreement
 Representatives of the SSA, Associated Oregon Industries, AOI, and Crown Zellerbach said they agree the SSA should be able to seek a court injunction in flagrant cases.

They were asked to report back March 21 with specific language such an amendment. There was disagreement over whether they should refer to "a dangerous degree of pollution" and whether a court hearing should be required prior to an injunction.

The industry representatives were unhappy with the section of the bill to give local units more anti-pollution powers. Charles Dubs of AOI said it would be a "step backward."

"The problems of pollution are very complex and technical and at these levels it is almost impossible to secure competent and experienced personnel," he said.

Dubs added that the AOI would back the SSA in seeking more general fund money for its work at the state level.

Local Control Possible
 The SSA replied that local governments could control such areas as space heating and trash burning where it is hard for the SSA to reach. It said local units could supplement the state controls.

A spokesman of the Salem League of Voters said "much could be done by an interested community" in supplementing state controls.

The industry spokesman expressed satisfaction with the performance of the SSA and said expanded local programs would breed confusion, weaken the overall program, and leave industry "serving two masters."
