

Irrigation Shortages Predicted

LAKEVIEW — Extremely low spring and summer streamflow for 1963 irrigation in Lake County will result from a "short" snow-pack, which is the lowest of record for this date, according to a report from W. T. Frost of the Soil Conservation Service. Stored water supplies will probably "save the day" for the Lakeview Water Users, but most other irrigators will probably have only one irrigation.

Water content of the mountain snowcover is only one-fifth average and only one-tenth of last year's on this date. Thirteen of the 20 snow stations measured in this area have no snow at this time.

Moisture in the upper watershed soils is excellent and totals 86 per cent of capacity at the Camas Creek Station.

Water stored in Dews Valley Reservoir totals 41,000 acre feet, compared with 4,000 last year at this date. Cottonwood is already up to 5,100 acre feet, compared with 200 last year. Further inflow to these reservoirs will be extremely limited, but should be sufficient for satisfactory irrigation this season.

Inflow to Dews Reservoir for the March-July period is forecast at 10,000 acre feet or 21 per cent average. This is half of the 20,000 acre feet inflow received in 1961.

March - June flows in other streams will be similar to 1959 and will be as follows: Chewaucan River, 38 per cent; Deep Creek, 36 per cent; Honey Creek, 28 per cent; and Twenty-mile Creek, 25 per cent. Many smaller streams will probably complete their flow in early April and will provide only one irrigation.

The next report on snow surveys and water supply conditions will be issued on April 8.

Bills Slow Down
SALEM (UPI) — The steady flow of bills into the 1963 legislature slowed abruptly to a trickle today — the 30th day of the session.

No bills were introduced in the senate, and only one in the house. It deals with public employees' retirement contributions.

Communism Textbook Has Specific Objectives

SALEM (UPI) — The publication, "Understanding the Nature of Communism," being considered by the State Board of Education, lists specific objectives for the course.

The six-week alternate course for high school seniors is designed to give the student a better understanding of communism so he will be better able to appreciate the advantages of a free society.

The specific objectives, the handbook advises teachers, are to make the student understand:

—Communist party members are committed to the dogma of the inevitability of world communism.

—Soviet economic power constitutes a major challenge to Democracy that may be more decisive than military or political power.

—The USSR has a planned economy wherein central economic planning coordinates and controls the total resources of the nation and utilizes them in ways determined by the party leadership for benefit of the state.

—Communists deny the existence of God and believe that man exists without a creator and without divine assistance.

—Communism and Communists exert tremendous influence throughout large areas, and communism appeals to large parts of the underprivileged and underdeveloped population because it promises immediate improvement.

—Communist party membership is restricted to a well-trained, thoroughly indoctrinated, and dedicated elite.

—In a Communist nation the party is the only legal political organization and, as in all totalitarian systems, the individual is subordinate to the state.

—Marxian communism grew out of — or developed because of — conditions existing in the early stages of the industrialization of Europe.

—It is necessary to distinguish between communism in theory and communism in practice.

—The Russian people are not necessarily discontented and like to overthrow the Communist regime.

—Russian education has a technical emphasis, is government subsidized, and students are "handed into fields that serve the needs of the state."

—Education is used as a weapon for strengthening the Soviet state and building a classless society.

—Critical attitudes and free inquiry are forbidden in a Communist state.

—Communists seize power through use of such tactics as infiltration, propaganda, utilization of existing discontent, manipulation of organizations including the U.N., formation of fake disarmament conferences and peace front organizations, manipulation of trade, and intensification of political, racial, and other differences.

—Communist governments exist by executive fiat; the legislature and judiciary have nominal power.

—There are a variety of Communist ideas about methods and timing of the spread of communism throughout the world — e.g.: Russian, Chinese.
