Game Lost With Shift

By OSWALD JACOBY

Newspaper Enterprise Assn. If I hadn't been vulnerable I might have tried a light bounding takeout double with the West hand. Instead, I found myself on lead against a four-spade contract.

I made my normal lead of the king of clubs and continued the suit in spite of my partner's play of the deuce. If his deuce had been a singleton I would give him a ruff, if it was the lowest of three I would drop South's queen. Sure enough I did drop the queen. There was no point in continuing clubs. South would not be embarrassed if he had to use one trump. I had a convenient jack of hearts shift so I led it.

Much to my surprise, my partner produced the ace and returned the suit, whereupon we sat back and waited for declarer to give us a diamond trick.

It certainly did not take any genius on my part to find a defense to beat four spades. I could have shifted to hearts at trick two or led a club at trick three and the result would have still been the same, but strangely enough the hand was played in a team game and the other West hand found a way to let declarer make five odd.

He noted his partner's deuce of clubs and shifted to the five of diamonds. East's queen fell to South's king. South drew trumps, finessed against the jack of diamonds, discarded the queen of clubs on the fourth diamond and conceded a trick to the ace of hearts.

You, South, hold:

What do you do?
A—Pass. Your partner is inviting a slam, but obviously he is worried about the diamond suit and you can't take care of it.

TV Headache Cure Requires Sacrifice

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Perhaps the mother with the TV headache might like some specific suggestions. This is what worked for me:

Sit down with your kids and admit you've been leaving too much decision-making up to them. Announce there are going to be new rules and regulations and that they must stick to them regardless of the howls.

The next step is a tough one because it requires some giving on Mother's part. Keep the TV off for several days, even if it means missing some of your favorite programs—or Dad's. (You'll need his help with this.) Then sit down and read with your children. Play chess, take them birdwatching, put on some good records. Help them discover the world beyond the idiot-box.

Allow them to resume their TV viewing with a fresh outlook—school work and chores completed—and you decide what's worth watching.

Don't expect success without plenty of sweating, Mother. And don't try it at all unless you have guts.—JUDY W.

Dear Judy: I heartily endorse your plan for accentuating the positive. As you so wisely pointed out, it requires work, but the results are worth it.

Dear Ann Landers: I've been reading your column since 1955 and think you hit the nail right on the noggin most of the time. But when you get hipped on a subject, Dearie, you proceed to go right off the deep end. One of your pet causes seems to be psychiatry.

I don't say psychiatry is worthless.

SALEM (UPI)—The need for legislation to halt fly-by-night contractors, painters, masons and other types of builders in the home improvement field was cited Tuesday before the Senate State and Federal Affairs Committee.

State Labor Commissioner Norman Nilsen and Portland City Attorney Alexander Brown testified for a bill which would set up a construction standards advisory council, and set rules for issuing licenses to contractors.

Deaths Laid To Canned Tuna Fish

DETROIT (UPI)—The deaths of two women from a rare type of food poisoning today prompted the A & P food chain to withdraw from retail sale in all of its 4,400 stores its own brand of tuna fish.

Two Grosse Ile neighbors who ate the fish as a snack Thursday night died from botulism E—a kind of food poisoning found in fish.

A&P headquarters in New York issued a statement at noon today in which it said the canned tuna would be taken off the shelves "pending the outcome of tests that will require three to seven days for completion."

The firm said laboratory tests were being conducted by at least four separate agencies.

Thomas Yutzy, spokesman for the National Cannery Association, said the suspect tuna was canned by the Washington Packing Corp. of San Francisco. He said an association representative would participate as an observer in the investigation.

The death of Mrs. Margaret McCarthy, 39, Tuesday, spurred a joint hunt by federal and local officials for the tuna, which bore an A&P label.

Mrs. Collette Brown, 37, died Friday and a post-mortem revealed the killer was botulism E. Injections of a special serum rushed in from Toronto failed to save Mrs. McCarthy. Her mother, Mrs. Vivian Kebbe, 57, became ill after eating the tuna and was treated at a hospital.

The 6½ ounce cans contained chunk style, light meat tuna. They have embossed on the lid "WYBY2" over "118X."

PRaises U.N. AND U.S. WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Joseph S. Clark, D-Pa., said Tuesday the United Nations and the United States have "scored a brilliant triumph" in bringing peace and freedom to the Congo.

He told the Senate a Congo review might be useful now, "when President Kennedy's policies towards Cuba and a test ban are the objects of equally harsh criticism" to determine why Congo critics are "so silent today."

Handling Of School Money Clarified In House Action

SALEM (UPI)—A first step in revamping the handling of basic school money was taken today by the House.

The change actually is a change in terminology, aimed at making it easier for the legislature and the public to see just how much money the state is chipping in for public schools.

The change has to do only with the way the money is appropriated, not with the distribution formula that determines how much goes to each school district.

Under the old method, the legislature for the current school year appropriated $120 per census child between the ages of 4 and 17.

Under the change, the same total sum would be described as "123 per census child between the ages of 5 and 17."

Under the change, the same total sum would be described as "123 per census child between the ages of 5 and 17."

The clarification is considered important since the largest part of the state's revenue goes for education.

Rep. John Mosser, R-Beaverton, said it is much more realistic to talk about children ages 5-17.

"We are trying to get a public understanding of the real level of support we are providing at the state level," he said.

Rep. Joe Rogers, R-Independence, objected that the change would "erode the fund" and be inconsistent with other parts of the basic school formula. Rogers also noted that the figure cited in the appropriation never matches the final sums received by districts on the basis of numerous factors taken into account in distribution.
