Small Gain In Minors

By OSWALD JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

When your partner opens one no-trump, you should have little or no interest in playing a minor suit game contract. It takes 11 tricks to make game in a minor and only nine to make game in no-trump.

Thus, in expert practice, you only go from no-trump to a minor when you have a bad hand and don't want to try for even one no-trump, or such a good hand that you want to investigate slam possibilities.

North has a hand with which he wants to be in game after his partner's no-trump opening. He only has seven high cards, but his six card suit headed by ace-king-ten looks like six probable tricks for his partner.

There is no better way to get to game than by bidding it and North jumps right to three no-trump.

West opens the deuce of spades and East plays the queen. South should win with the ace and count his tricks. He sees eight sure tricks. He sees eight sure tricks and each of three suits offer a possible ninth.

His best technique is to cash his queen of clubs, enter dummy with a second club, and try the diamond finesse. It happens to work, so South's worries are over. He can afford to try for an extra trick and the way is to run the clubs and see what happens. If East and West discard properly South should settle for his game. If they get careless he may find a way to get an over-trick.

A—Pass. You will probably want to bid a spade, but don't! A double followed by a bid should show a much better hand.
