Quips and Quotes.

Here at Home

Our teen-age son on science bent,
Stokes up while studying. Intent
On outer space and satellite
He reads and munches, bite by bite.
At learning he is quick and skilled—
That is, if we can keep him filled;
So, while he orbits, we must face
The problem here of inner space.

—Betty Ialer

Twelve-year-old Jane and her mother were in the kitchen washing dishes. Little Tommy and his father sat in the living room, looking over the evening newspaper. Suddenly the crash of breaking dishes could be heard throughout the house. Father and son listened expectantly, then Tommy announced: "Mother's hands must've been wet when she dropped them."

"How do you know it was Mother?" asked his father.

"Because," Tommy replied brightly, "she isn't yelling." —John L. Power

While many little boys take their medicine like men, others don't make a fuss at all. —Franklin P. Jones

The Brown family had guests, and during the course of the evening Mrs. Brown showed off her new mink coat. While the women went into ecstatic raves, the husband of one took Mr. Brown off to a corner.

"That looks like a pretty expensive coat," he said. "Must have set you back quite a few dollars."

"Oh, you might say we just got it on a trade-in," Brown replied laconically.

"Trade-in? What did you trade in for that?"

"Our old bank account."

Will someone please
Tell me why do
They always run out
Just before I do?
