

Novice Screen Writer Wins Oscar First Try

NEW YORK (UPI)—Abby Mann, just because they are unable to conform to what society expects of them.

"A movie must first succeed as entertainment or as a work of art," he said. "But I like to write about the things of our times. I think the world should enter in."

One of his three current "projects" involves adapting for the screen a sociological work by Oscar Lewis called "The Children of Sanchez."

Slum Life Depicted

The book deals with slum life in Mexico City.

"Eighty per cent of the world lives that way," Mann said. "If eighty per cent of the world lives that way, why shouldn't we write about it?"

Mann blames some of the ills of the movie industry in this country on its failure to focus on modern problems.

Mann, a bachelor who lives in Beverly Hills, Calif., also is working on the screen plays for "The Condemned of Altona," a play by Jean-Paul Sartre set in post-Nazi Germany, and Katherine Anne Porter's novel, "Ship of Fools."

A native of Philadelphia, Mann was reared in Pittsburgh, went to Temple University for a year, served a hitch with the Army in World War II and then came to New York (Greenwich Village).

He enrolled at NYU on the GI bill "but started cutting classes more and more and dropped out after one year."

Mann began working in television "eight or ten years ago" after observing, as an unsuccessful playwright, "I'm going to have to make a living somehow."

"It's very difficult for a young playwright," he said. "Even when popular notions about them are attacked."

Here he sought to "show" that persons should not be rejected.

'Ensign O'Toole Bust In High-Living Class

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Dean Jones, star of the "Ensign O'Toole" series, is the head of one Jones family that no one need be concerned about keeping up with.

When it comes to off-screen glamour and high living he is a bust.

There are plumbers and insurance adjusters who live on grander scales than the handsome young star.

Unlike many a status-seeking performer, Jones lives in an unfashionable suburb of Los Angeles in a three-bedroom stucco house without a swimming pool. His neighbors are everyday, hard-working middle class citizens. And that's the way Jones likes it.

But it does shake you up to think that here is a man who can afford to reside in Bel-Air or Beverly Hills, yet lives in a home that cost considerably less than $50,000—less than some stars in similar financial circumstances pay for servants in a year's time.

A comfortable, seemingly uncomplicated guy, Jones leads as normal a private life as you and I.

He and his wife, Mae, were married in 1954 and are the parents of two daughters, Carol Elizabeth, 7, and Deanna Mae, 5, who enchant and dominate their father.

"When I come home at night I lie flat on the living room floor for about 15 minutes to relax," Jones says, "and the girls crawl all over me telling me the news of their day."

Sounds normal so far, but Jones does have a streak of eccentricity about him. He wouldn't be an actor if he didn't.

When he lies on the living room floor there isn't a rug or a stick of furniture in the room. His explanation for this is that the family spends most of its time in the den.

"Sure we can afford to furnish the living room, only we can't make up our minds about how to furnish it. It's been this way for years. Once we decided to fill it with antiques, then changed our minds in favor of contemporary stuff. After that we thought we'd buy our paintings first and then get suitable furniture."

That was more than a year ago. There are two paintings—abstracts—on the walls but still no chairs, tables or sofas.

The previous owner of the house carved a huge hole in the wall to hold a fancy aquarium, but Jones isn't particularly fond of fish and left the hole gaping.

Jones and a friend built a bar to hide the excavation, but it wasn't high enough. He solved the problem recently by filling the hole with a hi-fi set, which still leaves a lot to be desired from an aesthetic standpoint.

Jones is so much like the guy next door that he isn't considered much of a celebrity in the neighborhood. And he has common, everyday problems, too. One of which is his weight.

He weighs 157 pounds and would like to gain another 10. But a high metabolism and tremendous such effectiveness in this particular department.

Because of its four-and-a-half-hour performance length, to which a one-hour intermission for dinner is added at the halfway point, the play is performed only six times a week, on evenings at 6 o'clock, Monday through Saturday.

Spoken 'Asides' Spark Laughter At 'Interlude'

NEW YORK (UPI)—Please don't be deceived by a certain comment you've heard to hear from some who have seen the brilliant revival of Eugene O'Neill's "Strange Interlude" at the Hudson Theatre.

The comment has to do with the spoken thoughts of the characters, liberally scattered through the actual dialogue and expressing the real feelings of the characters.

The criticism is that this no longer packs the wallop of novelty that it had 35 years ago in the original production; that it results in frequent audience laughter.

The only true criticism of the device, which was just as pertinent in 1928 as it is now, is that there is too much use of it, and that some of the expressed thoughts were as naive then as they are now.

Was Far Ahead

The fact that O'Neill was so far ahead of the times in 1928 that many of these mislabeled "asides" involved comment that audiences of the day did not realize were designed to amuse sardonic laughter. Which they get in the present production because audiences now recognize them for what they are.

But not only because the audiences are capable of this recognition. It is also because the director, Jose Quintero, who has done a magnificent job with this production, knows how to point his actors to achieve this result and has the actors who can execute.

The play reveals anew that O'Neill still has no equal at the stripping of humans down to the bones, devoid of the pelt of pretense and the flesh of convention. In fact, O'Neill himself, although he wrote two or three subsequent dramas superior to "Strange Interlude," did not again achieve

TV NOTES

NEW YORK (UPI)—Dorothy Loudon's work on Garry Moore's CBS hour this season has won her a regular berth for 1963-64. The singing comedienne will appear in 13 of the first 26 shows of next season.

The second batch of the "Biography" syndicated series of Official Films, produced by David L. Wolper and narrated by Mike Wallace, will include half-hour programs dealing with Pope Pius XII, Konrad Adenauer, Fidel Castro, Eamon de Valera, Wendell Willkie, Grace Kelly, Babe Dickson and Princess Margaret.

Singer Andy Williams will be back on the NBC network next season with a one-hour show, but not as a weekly feature. He will do 12 variety shows, to be aired on various Tuesday nights, October through May.

ABC has reserved 9:30-10 p.m. Fridays for a new situation comedy series called "The Farmer's Daughter" starring Inger Stevens. It will reach the air next fall. Kathleen Nesbitt, William Windom and Philip Colledge are regulars on the series. Miss Stevens plays a naive farm girl who moves from Minnesota to Washington, D.C., to work for a congressman.

Fred MacMurray has changed his mind about leaving ABC's "My Three Sons" series and will be back for its fourth season next fall.

Bob Banner, the busy producer who turns out the Garry Moore hours and "Candid Camera" weekly for CBS, as well as an occasional Carol Burnett special, plans to put his firm into Broadway stage production next August with a musical called "Apollo and Miss Agnes." It is based on a popular French play by Giraudoux, "The Apollo of Bellac."

TV NOTES

NEW YORK (UPI)—Please don't be deceived by a certain comment you've heard to hear from some who have seen the brilliant revival of Eugene O'Neill's "Strange Interlude" at the Hudson Theatre.

The comment has to do with the spoken thoughts of the characters, liberally scattered through the actual dialogue and expressing the real feelings of the characters.

The criticism is that this no longer packs the wallop of novelty that it had 35 years ago in the original production; that it results in frequent audience laughter.

The only true criticism of the device, which was just as pertinent in 1928 as it is now, is that there is too much use of it, and that some of the expressed thoughts were as naive then as they are now.

Was Far Ahead

The fact that O'Neill was so far ahead of the times in 1928 that many of these mislabeled "asides" involved comment that audiences of the day did not realize were designed to amuse sardonic laughter. Which they get in the present production because audiences now recognize them for what they are.

But not only because the audiences are capable of this recognition. It is also because the director, Jose Quintero, who has done a magnificent job with this production, knows how to point his actors to achieve this result and has the actors who can execute.

The play reveals anew that O'Neill still has no equal at the stripping of humans down to the bones, devoid of the pelt of pretense and the flesh of convention. In fact, O'Neill himself, although he wrote two or three subsequent dramas superior to "Strange Interlude," did not again achieve
