Slam Jam Suspected

By OSWALD JACOBY

One of the many components that go to make up a really top flight bridge player is that mysterious quality known as "feel of the table."

South ruffed the spade lead and studied the hand a while. Six clubs looked like a mighty easy contract. In fact, South wished that he had gone all the way to seven. Then he studied the hand a trifle more and wondered why his not-vulnerable opponents had let him buy the hand at six clubs.

Seven spades had to be a cheap save for them no matter how their hands divided yet someone must have thought that he had defense. In that case all three clubs would be in one hand. If East held them, South could lead a club to the ace and pick them up. Should West hold them South would have to lose a club trick in any event.

All this would be academic unless someone held four diamonds to the jack. But if clubs didn't break why should diamonds?

Then South's feel of the table came to him. He realized that East had invited a spade save when he jumped to four, but West let the hand play at six clubs. If anyone held three clubs it would be West.

Now South led his king of clubs and sure enough East showed out, but South had no trouble anyway. He played the ace and king of diamonds. West ruffed and led a second spade. South trumped in, led a club to dummy's ace and finessed against East's jack of diamonds.

Q—The bidding has been:
 South West North East

 You, South, hold:
 ♠ A K Q J 10 6 5 ♥ A 3 2 ♦ K 5 4 ♣
 What is your opening bid?
 A—Bid one spade only. You aren't quite strong enough for two spades and you have too many slam possibilities for a four spade opening.
