AROUND THE WORLD

GUESS WHO?—You should recognize that little girl at left, who has become quite popular with cameramen. Give up? It's Caroline Kennedy. Caroline and Sally Fay, the daughter of the Navy Undersecretary, are having a grand time as they run across the grass during a tour of the historic Civil War battlefield at Gettysburg, Pa., with their parents.

ORIENTAL MOODS—Two young women visiting the Galerie Lafayette department store in Paris seem to enjoy the added attraction. The store offered Japanese straw peasant hats to add to the Oriental mood of their products—they sell an array of Japanese foods.

OLD ROCKIN' CHAIR GOT HER—Kathy Williams, 16 months, relives the experience of getting her head caught in the rocking chair at Mar Vista, Calif. Mom called the police, who notified the fire department, who freed her.

DENTAL FLOSS?—Capturing a sawfish isn't always the easiest chore, but the Miami, Fla., Seaquarium collecting crew has come up with an answer. They get the razor-sharp saw entangled in a net and then tie a rope around it.

EASY LIVING—Bernard Cooperman takes advantage of the balmy spring weather and the fact that someone left an easy chair in front of his auto supply store in New York. On such a beautiful day as this, Cooperman, as well as most other New Yorkers, would much rather loiter in the sun than work. It didn't last too long, however, since duty calls.

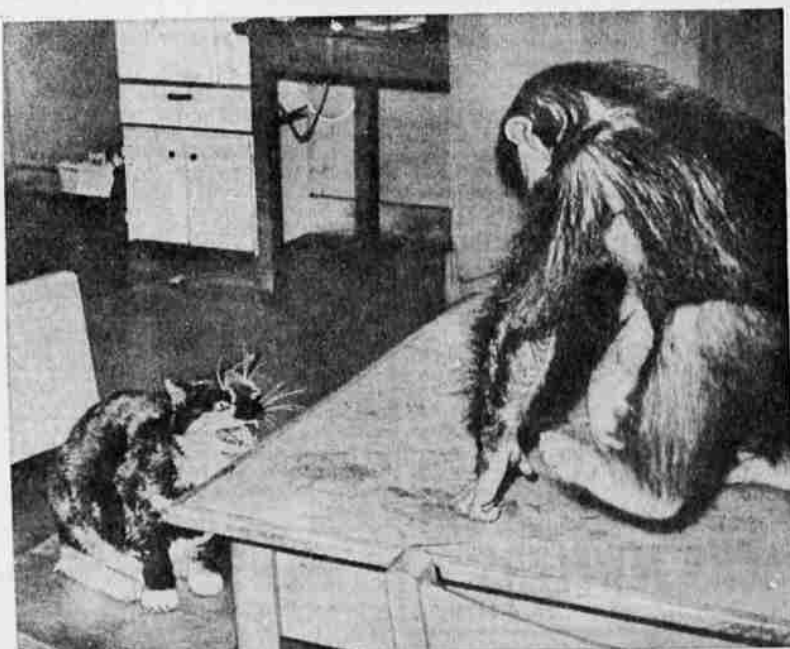

POETIC SILHOUETTE—As the sun dances on the water and a graceful swan paddles by, a little girl looks on. This poetic silhouette was captured along the shores of a lake in Massapequa, N. Y., where Susan Cassel, 7, sat quietly to watch the graceful swan.

SOMMER'S HERE—Pretty Elke Sommer, one of Europe's brightest young actresses, makes a pretty picture after arriving by jet in New York from Frankfurt, Germany. Elke had just completed her co-starring role in the movie, "The Victors."

PARIS FASHION PARADE FOR MEN—These four sharply dressed men are showing off the latest in men's wear from Paris. The jackets feature one and two button closings. The styling is for town and the trend for hats is strongly fashionable.

A CAT SPAT—There's no sign of friendliness from this feline as the chimp is greeted with a fierce hiss. It seems Sarah, the 15-month-old chimp, is regarded as an intruder at London's Crystal Palace Zoo by the cat, who apparently wants to be the top "dog."

ROUND-UP TIME—One of the most exciting and eventful jobs in the history of the country still continues as an annual function for ranchers in the open ranges of western Nebraska. It's round-up time at the Aubrey Keller Ranch near Valentine, and Ervin Losh tows one of the calves to the branding pit, handling it as gently as possible.

THEY'RE USING THEIR HEADS—Natives carrying baskets filled with wares on their heads is not an unusual sight in the busy market areas of Port-au-Prince, Haiti. Although a slight touch of modern living in the capital city is evident, it's very rare.
