Bowling Boy Friend Throws Plans In Tizzy

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: Our big Prom is coming up soon. Everything was all set. I have already bought my gown and shoes. The trouble is my boy friend found out just yesterday that he has to bow that night.

He said he would be glad to let a substitute take his place on the team but on that night they bowl for the trophy. He must be there because he's the best bowler on the team and they are depending on him.

He offered to take me to the Prom after bowling but it would be 10:30 at the earliest. My parents say this is too late to go any place.

My boy friend said we could meet at the Prom if it was O.K. with me, but I think I'd feel out of place until he arrived since the Prom is for couples only. Please help me solve this one. It's bigger than both of us. — ALL DRESSED UP WITH NO PLACE TO GO

Dear Ann: I hate to admit that I work with people of such low calibre, but I need your help. This is a large office and several dozen desks are placed side by side. I can't leave a stamp, a quarter, a package of gum, a sack of candy or even a tube of toothpaste in my desk drawer. Everything disappears.

I have a strong hunch who the guilty person is, but I have no proof. Of course he would deny it and I'd have an enemy for life. What shall I do? — DISGUSTED

Dear Disgusted: If you have a desk with no lock, go to the office manager and ask for a desk you can lock.

Dear Ann Landers: You hear a lot about extravagant wives and stingy husbands. In our marriage the situation is reversed. I am a firm believer in budgeting, living within one's means and saving for the future.

Since we married six years ago it's been a constant battle. My husband spends money freely, buys whatever he takes a fancy to, with no thought of price, need or anything else. He says he's going to enjoy life and he urges me to do the same. If I had as little respect for money as he did we'd be broke in no time.

Am I a fool for living this lopsided existence? Should I spend spend spend as he does? Perhaps if I did he'd wake up. I'll take your advice. — PINCH PENNY

Dear Pinch: I can't be of much help because I don't know how much your husband makes, how much it costs you to live, or how much he spends.

If he is totally irresponsible it would be disastrous for you to

Forgotten Soldier Nearly War Victim

YAKIMA, Wash. (UPI)—There was Private Daniel J. Arthur peacefully guarding his own private make-believe mine field.

And there, on all sides of him, were 40,000 soldiers on maneuvers armed with very real ammunition.

"I was kind of happy being away from everybody," said Arthur who had not been told to leave his guard post Thursday in Exercise Coulee Crest, largest peacetime maneuver in the West since World War II.

Jets swooped overhead and dropped fire bombs.

"I tried to wave at them but they didn't see me," said Arthur today. "Then I realized I had the whole army chasing me. With guns."

Arthur, 17, got out pencil and paper and began writing what he thought was a farewell note to his wife, Wanda.

Not so Peaceful

"It ain't so peaceful here anymore," he wrote. "There are a bunch of jets tearing holy hell out of my hill. It seems like the whole Air Force is out to get me."

Arthur couldn't dig in.

"The ground was just too hard," he said. "I just got under my steel pot (helmet) and waited."

It was not a long wait.

Heavy artillery began zeroing in on Private Arthur.

He wrote:

"The bombs and cannon didn't get me but now they've got the artillery after me. Boy, this could drive a guy nuts. I wish they'd stop firing and remember I'm out here."

Then, Private Arthur saw what he thought were trucks approaching.

They were tanks. The tanks opened up at him.

Private Arthur hit the dirt.

Tanks Rumble

Eventually, the tanks rumbled off over the desert churning up dust on the Yakima firing range.

A group of men approached.

Arthur got up happily, fired three shots into the air and started walking toward them. The infantrymen dropped to their knees and began firing at him.

Back to the helmet.

Finally, the infantrymen realized Arthur had been left out in no man's land by mistake and stopped firing.

Gen. Paul D. Adams, commander-in-chief of the U.S. Strike Command, said new safety procedures would be established so no other soldier would be left to meet a similar fate during next week's firing here.

Reds Offer Disarm Plan To America

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin called on Secretary of State Dean Rusk today to deliver a new Russian memorandum on the general subject of disarmament.

State Department Press Officer Robert McCloskey said the "informal memorandum" did not include anything on nuclear testing.

Dobrynin would say, when talking with reporters after the 20-minute session, only that his call on the secretary concerned "some aspects of disarmament."

The new "informal memorandum" on the general problems of disarmament came just a couple of days after President Kennedy received a message from Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev indicating no enthusiasm for new British-American suggestions for speeding up work on a nuclear test ban treaty.

McCloskey said he did not know whether the new memorandum delivered by Dobrynin added anything new to previous Russian proposals on disarmament. Past Russian proposals have always lacked the type of inspection and control arrangements which the Western powers demand as a guarantee that agreement would be observed.

Dobrynin was accompanied to today's meeting by the top counselor of the Soviet Embassy here, Georgi Kornienko. Rusk had with him Ambassador-at-large Llewellyn E. Thompson, former ambassador to Moscow, who now serves as the top adviser to Kennedy and Rusk on Soviet affairs.

Dobrynin's suddenly scheduled Saturday morning meeting with Rusk followed by three days President Kennedy's grim warning that it may be now or never on a nuclear test ban treaty.

Kennedy said at a news conference Wednesday that East and West appeared to be getting farther away from agreement on a test ban treaty and said unless there is early agreement he would expect another round of testing by both sides.

W. Hilyard Found Dead

William F. Hilyard, 58, Route 2, Box 329, was found dead in the pump house of his ranch home about 1:30 p.m. Friday, Oregon State Police report.

An employee on the Hilyard ranch found the body in the pump structure which is behind the residence. Death was from a bullet from a .30-30 caliber rifle. It was not known whether the death was accidental or a suicide. State police indicated there was no note found at the scene, and members of the family report no known reason for Hilyard to take his own life.

The Hilyard ranch had been bothered lately by dog packs, and family members speculate that Hilyard may have gone to the pump house to get the rifle and been the victim of an accidental gunshot.

An autopsy was scheduled.

Funeral services have been scheduled for 2 p.m. Monday at O'Hair's Memorial Chapel with interment at Klamath Memorial Park.

Dropouts Analyzed

DUNSMUIR—Dropouts at Dunsmuir Union High School are relatively few and usually for acceptable reasons, Delwin Poe, school superintendent, reported to the school board at its May meeting.

In an analysis of the current senior class, the 11 per cent dropout during its four high school years reflects that five per cent were boys enlisting in the U.S. Navy and five per cent were girls leaving school to be married. Only one student left to work and this choice was partially dictated by financial need, Poe reported.

Arthur Crowe was asked to present diplomas to 62 graduating seniors.

The resignation of Nadine Anderson, board member, was accepted at the meeting. Mrs. Anderson and her husband are now making their home in Oakland.

Twelve of the 15 faculty members have renewed contracts for the coming year. James Kesson, language teacher; Lynn Lewis, physical education teacher; and Doris Loeske, English teacher, are resigning. Florence Otkay, office secretary, is also resigning.

Approval was given the senior class to hold its banquet at Bridge Bay providing private transportation can be arranged for all the class, with one adult in each automobile.

Ann Landers Heads TB Christmas Seal Drive

Ann Landers, the Herald and News woman problem solver, has been named to help solve a major world-wide problem as honorary national chairman of the 1963 Christmas Seal campaign of the National Tuberculosis Association.

Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy, wife of the President of the United States, was honorary national chairman of the 1962 Christmas Seal drive.

Announcement of the appointment of Ann Landers, who is the nation's leading human relations columnist (and whose column is published in 557 newspapers) was made May 12 at the association's annual meeting at Denver, Colo.

In accepting the appointment, Miss Landers said, "Most people view tuberculosis as a medical problem, a community problem, or a fund raising problem. As my mail testifies, it also is a creator of devastating mental, moral, emotional and marital problems."

Citing problems created by family separation, hardship and death resulting from tuberculosis, Miss Landers pointed out that tuberculosis costs this country 700 million dollars every year.

Business Spurt Called Solid Trend For Year

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (UPI)—Administration economists are convinced that the recent spurt in business activity is not a fleeting burst of spring fever, but the start of a solid trend that should hold up this year.

The same feeling of optimism also is shared by some of the top economists in the business world, who usually are a lot harder to convince.

This was the mood Friday when both got together to discuss their hopes for 1963 during the spring session of the Business Council, which includes about 175 of the nation's top business leaders.

The council is receiving briefings from administration officials during its closed sessions in this mountain resort.

The group today was scheduled to hear Christian A. Herter, special trade representative; J. Herbert Hollomon, assistant secretary of commerce and Gen. Lucius D. Clay.

The dinner meeting was to be addressed by Republican Gov. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania, former businessman and congressman and sometimes mentioned as a GOP presidential prospect.

Walter W. Heller, President Kennedy's chief economic adviser, gave every indication Friday that the administration expected the economy to top the $378 billion gross national product (GNP) forecast for 1963.

Heller did not revise the figure, it was known that administration economists expect the total to reach at least a record $383 billion.

The GNP is the sum of all goods and services and is considered the best indication of how the economy is doing.

Heller told newsmen at a briefing that the high level of consumer spending, which gave the

Business Spurt Called Solid Trend For Year

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (UPI)—Administration economists are convinced that the recent spurt in business activity is not a fleeting burst of spring fever, but the start of a solid trend that should hold up this year.

The same feeling of optimism also is shared by some of the top economists in the business world, who usually are a lot harder to convince.

This was the mood Friday when both got together to discuss their hopes for 1963 during the spring session of the Business Council, which includes about 175 of the nation's top business leaders.

The council is receiving briefings from administration officials during its closed sessions in this mountain resort.

The group today was scheduled to hear Christian A. Herter, special trade representative; J. Herbert Hollomon, assistant secretary of commerce and Gen. Lucius D. Clay.

The dinner meeting was to be addressed by Republican Gov. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania, former businessman and congressman and sometimes mentioned as a GOP presidential prospect.

Walter W. Heller, President Kennedy's chief economic adviser, gave every indication Friday that the administration expected the economy to top the $378 billion gross national product (GNP) forecast for 1963.

Heller did not revise the figure, it was known that administration economists expect the total to reach at least a record $383 billion.

The GNP is the sum of all goods and services and is considered the best indication of how the economy is doing.

Ann Landers Heads TB Christmas Seal Drive

Ann Landers, the Herald and News woman problem solver, has been named to help solve a major world-wide problem as honorary national chairman of the 1963 Christmas Seal campaign of the National Tuberculosis Association.

Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy, wife of the President of the United States, was honorary national chairman of the 1962 Christmas Seal drive.

Announcement of the appointment of Ann Landers, who is the nation's leading human relations columnist (and whose column is published in 557 newspapers) was made May 12 at the association's annual meeting at Denver, Colo.

In accepting the appointment, Miss Landers said, "Most people view tuberculosis as a medical problem, a community problem, or a fund raising problem. As my mail testifies, it also is a creator of devastating mental, moral, emotional and marital problems."

Citing problems created by family separation, hardship and death resulting from tuberculosis, Miss Landers pointed out that tuberculosis costs this country 700 million dollars every year.

Dropouts Analyzed

DUNSMUIR—Dropouts at Dunsmuir Union High School are relatively few and usually for acceptable reasons, Delwin Poe, school superintendent, reported to the school board at its May meeting.

In an analysis of the current senior class, the 11 per cent dropout during its four high school years reflects that five per cent were boys enlisting in the U.S. Navy and five per cent were girls leaving school to be married. Only one student left to work and this choice was partially dictated by financial need, Poe reported.

Arthur Crowe was asked to present diplomas to 62 graduating seniors.

The resignation of Nadine Anderson, board member, was accepted at the meeting. Mrs. Anderson and her husband are now making their home in Oakland.

Twelve of the 15 faculty members have renewed contracts for the coming year. James Kesson, language teacher; Lynn Lewis, physical education teacher; and Doris Loeske, English teacher
