Oregon Museum Plans To Build Planetarium

The Oregon Museum of Science and Industry at Portland announced plans today for a $600,000 building project to add two new wings and a planetarium to the OMSI building on S.W. Canyon Rd.

Constructed in 1948 with a spectacular one-day community "barn-raising" bee, the museum has rapidly outgrown its present facilities, according to Dr. Donald Stotler, OMSI president.

"Since 1958, OMSI has enjoyed a 20 per cent increase in use annually. Last year over 330,000 persons visited the science center."

"Today our situation is, simply, that we have run out of space. Classroom space, office, storage and exhibit space are at a premium. At present, OMSI science classes are over-subscribed by 50 per cent. Although 5,000 young people registered for these classes we were able to accommodate only 2,500."

"OMSI must expand if we are to meet the community's needs now and in the future," he concluded.

The building program envisions construction of a new outdoor planetarium, a wing devoted to the modern science of agriculture and a second wing to be used for the state's educational TV network offices and telecasting studios.

Funds for the building program will be sought in a state-wide campaign effort, Stotler reported.

Dr. Sam Diack, Portland, who signed the original OMSI construction drive, will head up the new campaign effort.

The proposed agricultural wing, to be known as the Max Lehmann Memorial Agricultural Wing, will house exhibits ranging from genetics to modern food technology. It is intended to stimulate young people to select technical agriculture as a vocation and to strengthen urban understanding of modern scientific agriculture.

The contemplated planetarium would replace a temporary planetarium whose projection equipment is obsolete. New projection equipment would be housed in a dome 33-ft. in diameter in a structure seating 120 persons. It would enable OMSI to produce shows featuring comets, northern lights, moon topography, etc., and, in addition, would be suitable for teaching space-age mathematics.

Modoc FHA Girls Hold Fashion Tea

ALTURAS—The FHA girls of Modoc Union High School entertained classmates and friends at a tea and fashion show on the afternoon of May 24.

The girls modeled dresses they had made in homemaking classes or as part of their FHA projects. These dresses were entered in a contest sponsored by the high school for the best made dress and best design for its type. Judges of the contest were Fern Doss of Fort Bidwell and Mary Cook of Eagleville.

Winners of the sewing contest were Charlotte McDowell, first; Virginia Fisher, second; Lindy Laird, third; Melanie Stanton, fourth; and Shirley French, honorable mention.

The girls modeled all types of clothing from sportswear to casuals and dressy evening wear.

Engaged Girl Desires Ring Instead Of Watch

Dear Ann Landers: I am going to be engaged to a wonderful person. He told me last evening that he will give me a wrist watch instead of a ring because he is a Seventh Day Adventist and they do not believe in wearing jewelry. A wrist watch is considered utilitarian and is therefore acceptable.

He is a deeply religious man and I respect his views but when a girl is engaged people expect to see a ring on her finger. It would be easier to wear a ring than to explain to my friends and family why I don't have one.

Some of the people at my fiancee have even suggested that my fiancee make up the story about no rings. They claim to know Seventh Day Adventists who do wear jewelry. Can you tell me if this is so or not? — HIS IN-TENDED

Dear Intended: The devout members of this religious group do not wear jewelry — even wedding rings. The Seventh Day Adventists who do wear jewelry are not living up to their religious teachings in the strictest sense of the word.

Dear Ann Landers: When my husband describes an incident he distorts the details beyond recognition. He adds frills and sometimes he switches the whole story around and even makes up a new ending.

He has been doing this for almost 20 years. I've called him on it — in private, of course — but it hasn't helped.

Yesterday our nine-year-old son said to me, "Daddy is a nice man but he lies. He told Uncle Harold about what happened at the ball park and it wasn't like daddy said at all. I was right there and some of those things never happened."

I didn't know what to say to the boy so I changed the subject. It is bound to come up again. Please give me some help. I hate to tell our son his dad is a liar. — ASHAMED

Dear Ashamed: People who embroider stories beyond recognition are basically dishonest. Liar is a strong word, but if you can find a better one I'll buy it.

Tell the boy that SOME people like to dress up their stories so they will sound funnier or more exciting. Explain that this is not the way you want him to do. Emphasize that it is more important to be truthful than to be funny.

Dear Ann Landers: I was very much interested in the letter signed "Blue Grass Heartache." It was from a bereaved sister who was unhappy because her brother-in-law remarried less than six months after his wife's death. She said it was an insult to her sister's memory and to the entire family. Perhaps a thought expressed by my own husband will

Youth Learns Judge Was Cop

MOUNT SHASTA — Jack Ray Huffman, 19, Weed, made an error in not learning more of the background of Judge John Kinstry when he was brought before the judge for trial on a charge of disturbing the peace on Monday.

The Weed lad made many disparaging remarks of policemen and gave his opinion of all peace officers. He talked himself right into a straight jail sentence with no chance for a fine settling the case. He got 60 days in the Siskiyou County Jail and no time off for good behavior.

Too late he learned that Judge Kinstry had been a policeman for 30 years before becoming a judge.

House-Approved Debt Limit Bill Pushed By Democrats

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic leaders changed their strategy Tuesday for rushing passage of a bill hiking the national debt limit before the Treasury breaks through the present legal ceiling.

In an 11th hour move, following a White House conference, leaders decided to seek passage of the House - approved $309 billion debt limit bill, instead of a Senate Finance Committee version.

Democrats thus abandoned the announced strategy of trying to send the Senate measure to a House-Senate conference group.

Kennedy Signs Outdoor Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy Tuesday signed into law a bill to step up coordinated federal, state and local expansion of outdoor recreation programs.

The legislation will enable the Interior Department, through its new Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, to undertake planning, research and coordination tasks.

with hopes for fast action on a compromise bill. The House bill would lift the debt ceiling to $309 billion just for July and August. The Senate Finance Committee voted to allow that limit for a 12-month period.

Republicans served notice they would oppose the move to scrap the finance committee version on the floor.

The decision to try to reverse the finance group's amendment on the floor, rather than give the House a second crack at the bill, came after an early morning meeting of Senate Democratic leaders and President Kennedy.

It was believed that Treasury officials impressed the leadership with their argument that the present $305 billion ceiling must be increased as quickly as possible. The debt is due to rise to $305.2 billion by the close of business Wednesday.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, Mont., sought permission for the finance group to meet in an effort to have the bill changed back to the House version. But Senate GOP Leader Everett M. Dirksen, Ill., blocked this by objecting.

It was then that the decision was made to force a showdown vote on the issue on the floor.
