

Dog At Dinner Table Irks Master Of House

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Several weeks ago my wife's relatives were invited here for dinner. After saying grace I looked up and there was a dog — a 50 pound Boxer — sitting at the table directly across from me.

My brother-in-law proceeded to ladle out beef stew for the animal, right on the plate, as if the dog were a person. I announced flatly that I was leaving the table and would have my dinner in the bedroom. No one said a word—and I did just that.

Now my brother-in-law and sister are furious with me and they refuse to come to our home again unless I apologize. My wife is on their side. Ann, she insists I was rude and ungracious and "a poor host."

I refuse to apologize. I contend they owe me an apology. I regret now that I was fool enough to leave my own table and allow that dog to sit there. Had I used my head I would have told them to take the animal into the back yard.

Everyone in the family is choosing up sides and having a say. Please Ann, may I have your opinion of all this?—NO DINNER COMPANION FOR A DOG

Dear No Companion: You owe me no apology. If your sister and brother-in-law wish to allow their dog to be a guest at their table, that's their business, but they should not assume that the dog is welcome at the table of relatives.

Dear Ann Landers: My problem is an unusual one and I need your help. I've been married for 15 years to a woman who says she is in love with me, happy as a lark, and wouldn't trade places with anyone in the world—but her suspicious nature is making my life unbearable.

About six months ago she began to ask me about the women I work with at the chemical plant. She insisted that she was able to detect an odor of perfume on my shirt and tie—and who was I seeing?

I am not seeing anyone and I have no wish to see anyone. I go straight home after work and I stay there. Two weeks ago my wife came down to the plant and sniffed around all the women to see if she could track down the perfume. She had no luck but intends to try again, she said.

I've asked a couple of friends at work if they can smell any perfume on me and they say no. Please tell me what to do about this. I am—TRED

Dear Tred: Overactive imaginations have been known to destroy marriages. I hope your wife doesn't lose by a nose. If she persists in this bloodhound routine, suggest that she talk her problem over with a professional.

Dear Ann: I am almost 12 but I act, feel and look older. If you met me like on the street you'd take me for a girl of 16.

Mom is A.O.K. but dad is a creep. Every Friday night a bunch of us girls take turns having the gang over. There are six couples and we are all in the eighth grade. We play records and dance and serve refreshments.

The problem is my dad won't let us turn off the lights in the rumor room when we dance. He is an old man of 41 and doesn't realize it's no fun to dance unless it is dark. Nobody else's parents object and I'm embarrassed that my dad is so old-fashioned. Also I think he is evil-minded. What do you think?—MEANIE'S DAUGHTER

Dear Daughter: Your dad sounds like the only parent in the bunch who has a working brain cell.

Eighth grade kids should not be partying boy-girl style and dancing in the dark can lead to nothing good. You kids are at least three years ahead of yourselves and I say no to all of it.

Are you tempted to smoke because the crowd does? If so, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Teen-age Smoking," enclosing with your request 10 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Britain, Russia Appeal For Laotian Cease Fire

LONDON (UPI)—Britain and the Soviet Union today jointly appealed for an effective cease-fire in Laos, the Foreign Office disclosed.

In a joint message addressed to neutralist Laotian Premier Prince Souvanna Phouma, they appealed to him to "convey to all parties in Laos their appeal to them to come together without delay to reach agreement."

In the message the two chairmen stated that they fully endorsed the desire of the neutralist group on Laos as expressed in Souvanna's message for peace, concord and strict neutrality in the kingdom of Laos.

"At the same time the co-chairmen expressed the earnest hope that all parties in Laos will afford to the International Control Commission for supervision and control, established by the Geneva agreement, the fullest cooperation and facilities to enable it, in the strict conformity with the Geneva agreement and with the concurrence of the coalition government of Laos as provided in the said agreements, to supervise the settlement and carry out such inquiries as are necessary to inform the co-chairmen and the signatories of the Geneva agreement of the true situation in Laos."

FOR COMBAT UNIT

MIAMI (UPI)—Several hundred Cubans who received military training in the U.S. Army have formed a "combat unit to take war to Cuba."

Police said later the youths had guns trained on both her and the state policemen at the time.

Police surrounded the house and ordered the youths outside after Mrs. Hamilton signaled to a neighbor through a window that the boys were upstairs. She then dashed outside to safety.

The youths came out with their

THE DOCTOR SAYS Neglect Complicates Varicose Veins Woes

By W. G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.,
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Varicose veins are among the most common health problems of mankind. In order to understand them, one needs to understand the circulation.

When your heart beats, blood is forced into your arteries under pressure. This causes the arteries to pulsate. The no pulsation in the veins.

In order for the blood to be returned to your heart it must fall by gravity or be squeezed upward by the contraction of your large voluntary muscles.

This is one reason why exercise helps circulation, but even this action could not keep the blood moving toward your heart unless your veins were equipped with valves to prevent any backward flow.

The hardest part of the job is getting the blood from your feet back to your heart. Most of the time you are standing or sitting, and the blood has to travel uphill.

When the veins of the legs are subjected to the pressure of gravity, as when you stand in one spot for a long time, they may dilate.

When such dilation has been at work over many years, it may reach a point where the valves can no longer prevent the blood from flowing downward. Such valves are said to be "incompetent."

This is one of the hazards of occupations that require standing in one place for long periods, as may be the case with barbers, dentists, bank tellers, and others. Pregnancy and childbirth also favor the development of varicose veins in some women.

When the incompetence is mild there are usually no symptoms, but the condition is likely to be progressive. As it progresses, aching pains, easy tiring, and a feeling of heaviness in the legs may be present.

In the early stages, some relief may be used by keeping the feet elevated on a footstool as much of the time as possible, and by wearing an elastic weave roller bandage, or elastic stockings.

These procedures do not remove the cause, nor prevent the condition from progressing.

On the other hand, in the early stages the veins may be injected with a clotting agent which will turn the incompetent veins into solid scar tissue.

The popularity of this method has fluctuated and it is now generally agreed that to be effective it must be applied early in the course of the disease.

Another important factor is the choice of the clotting agent. Recent studies indicate that sodium tetradecyl sulfate gives the best results.

Taking these veins out of circulation, far from interfering with the return of blood to the heart, improves the process because the venous system is an interlacing network with numerous detour channels. The operation also helps to prevent these collateral channels from becoming incompetent.

When varicose veins have existed for many years, such complications as varicose ulcers of the skin and inflammation of the veins may occur. These complications are best prevented by having the varicose veins removed.

If, however, leg ulcers have already developed they must be healed before the varicose veins can be removed. This usually requires a prolonged stay in bed. After the ulcers are healed, if the varicose veins are not removed the ulcers will return.

Once the veins are removed, the sooner the patient is allowed to walk the better, but an elastic bandage should be worn for 2 or 3 months after the operation.

Although varicose veins are common, the greatest damage is done by neglecting them and putting off having them injected or removed.

Two Teen-agers Swallow Poison To Elude Police

READING, Pa. (UPI)—Two teen-agers, flushed from a home where they had held a woman hostage, died Tuesday night apparently after swallowing potassium cyanide tablets to avoid capture.

Police said the youths, one of them described as a "model boy," had just been taken into custody near Fleetwood, 17 miles from here, when they collapsed. They were pronounced dead on arrival at St. Joseph's Hospital here.

The teen-agers were identified tentatively as Charles E. Montagna, 16, and Edgar Barrone, 18, both of Phillipsburg, N.J.

State police said the search for the boys started Monday after they fled their car following a "relatively minor" auto accident in Fleetwood. They were reported to be armed at the time, and Fleetwood police sought assistance from state police who combed the nearby countryside.

Detective Sgt. Leroy Lilly and Trooper Donald Holloway were in the area near the summer home of Dr. William Hamilton, a dentist, and stopped at the house to check on Mrs. Hamilton. The woman told them she was all right and had not seen anyone.

Police said later the youths had guns trained on both her and the state policemen at the time.

Police surrounded the house and ordered the youths outside after Mrs. Hamilton signaled to a neighbor through a window that the boys were upstairs. She then dashed outside to safety.

The youths came out with their hands in the air and collapsed as they were taken in custody.

New Jersey police said Monday night that Barrone was a parolee from a 1960 auto theft conviction.

They described Montagna as a "model boy" who was slated to graduate from Phillipsburg High School with honors and who recently received an award from the Civil Air Patrol.
