The certificate also represented an expression of esteem from his co-workers. Ashworth, who hails from Gardiner, Ore., said he had no definite plans for his retirement years other than spending more time hunting and fishing. Here, Ashworth, surrounded by fellow employees, cuts a cake during a farewell party given in his honor.

Wall Street Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — United Business Service notes several factors which currently are in the market's favor. These include: The improved quality of corporate earnings, the less cyclical nature of the economy and the smaller supply of shares from new financing.

The Boston-based firm feels that as long as the outlook for business and corporate earnings continues so favorable, the market should perform fairly well. However, the firm points out that after an advance of the proportions experienced recently, it will not be surprising to see a period of pause and consolidation before the uptrend continues.

G. S. Colby of Colby & Co. is somewhat uncertain about the very near term, but still leans to the view that investors will be able to buy some stocks a little cheaper before they become dearer. Colby feels that if this happens, investors should seize the opportunity to buy on weakness, and if enough weakness develops, institutional investors should become more active and the general public will return to the market.

BRUCE TOLMIE

MERLIN PULLIAM

Simplot Makes Shift For Tolmie, Pulliam

Bruce Tolmie, manager for four years of the Simplot Soilbuilders Company in Klamath Falls, has been promoted and transferred to Billings, Mont. He will be succeeded as manager at Klamath Falls and Tulelake by Merlin Pulliam.

In his new post he will assist in the location and evaluation of sites for company-owned distribution outlets in the West.

The announcement of his promotion was made by Bernald L. Brown, agronomist for the company at Pocatello, Idaho, headquarters.

Brown stated that with increased production capacity, the Simplot Company is continually re-evaluating its distribution system for its products in the West, and Tolmie's promotion is the result of this expansion program.

The expansion, under a five-year plan, will cost in excess of $5 million and involves the upgrading of mining property and the doubling of fertilizer production capacity at the Pocatello plant.

New distribution sites will be in the Simplot marketing area which includes all states west of the Mississippi, Iowa, and Minnesota.

Tolmie, who will leave as soon as school is out with his wife, Mildred, and two small daughters, Linda and Lori, expressed regret at leaving Klamath Falls, "because it has grown on us. We hate to leave the city and the people."

Vacation Trip Figures For Family Given By AAA

How much will it cost to take the family on a vacation trip by automobile this year?

The AAA places the cost at about $31 per day for two people, according to the Oregon State Motor Association. Last year's figure was placed at $29 per day.

The AAA breaks down the budget as follows: $10.50 for meals and snacks; $11 for lodging; $7 for gas and oil (based on 300 miles per day); $2.50 for tips and miscellaneous. The $11 average for lodging would be less in resort areas during the off-season and, by picnicking along the way, meal costs could be reduced, the Oregon AAA Club points out.

Based on the $31 daily average for two people, the motorist's vacation dollar is divided approximately as follows: 34 per cent for food; 22 per cent for gas; a year or less.

and oil; 26 per cent for lodging; and eight per cent for tips and miscellaneous.

The Triple-A's annual report on car operation costs for general use, based on annual surveys of cost accounting engineers, shows the costs for 1963 have decreased slightly from the figures for 1962, the Motor Association said.

The AAA computes car cost operation on the basis of fixed costs plus variable costs. Fixed costs are insurance, license, registration and depreciation. Variable costs are gas and oil, maintenance and tires.

For 1963, the cost of driving an average eight-cylinder standard sedan is placed at 3.70 cents per mile plus $2.17 per day. Last year, the figures were 3.96 cents per mile plus $2.21 per day. This is based on driving 18,000 miles for food; 22 per cent for gas; a year or less.

BUSINESS SOLD — Mrs. Ida Mochettaz, owner of Ida's Tailor Shop and active in the business for 26 years, has sold her shop to Josephine Harris of Klamath Falls. The business is located at 125 North Eighth Street.
