WALL STREET CHATTER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Analysts here are saying there is "absolutely no change" in the opinion that the present internal market churning is just like that of December 1962 and February 1963 and eventually will culminate in a renewed upward thrust.

Dines feels that as long as the Dow-Jones industrials average remains safely nestled in its major uptrend there is no chance of a major decline.

The Alexander Hamilton Institute believes that any further easing of stock prices will prove temporary and will soon meet renewed demand from institutional investors who were known to have been active buyers during the first quarter.

The International Statistical Bureau continues to emphasize that the market will reach new highs even though advances for a time will be somewhat labored.

Council Reverses Self On Worden Avenue Improvement

The Worden Avenue improvement project—the subject of considerable controversy between the taxpayers who would pick up the tab for the program—was back where it started several months ago after two members of the city council voted against the ordinance as it was recently amended and then reintroduced the measure as it had been originally proposed.

The act required a two-thirds majority of the five-man council to be put into effect.

All of the council members had indicated their support of the Worden Street project, but they differed as to the method of bringing it to a conclusion.

The alternatives before the council last night, other than abandoning the project, were one, to approve the amended ordinance which called for paving and constructing curbs and gutters on a four-block strip of Worden Street from Upham to Shelley Street. Then, next year, the council indicated it would consider passing another ordinance to complete the street improvement job on the remaining two blocks of Worden Avenue, from Shelley to Lytton streets.

The other path open to the councilmen was to disapprove the amended ordinance and re-submit the original measure which proposes that the entire length of Worden Street be improved at the same time. This course they chose.

The ordinance was amended to exclude the two blocks from Shelley to Lytton streets two weeks ago when residents of that area appeared before the council and voiced a vigorous protest to the street improvement work.

The opponents of the measure were not against the street improvements as such, but were opposed to the cost of the project, which had been estimated by City Manager Bob Kyle at $12.60 per foot for each lot facing Worden Avenue.

At the meeting last night, Kyle said that eliminating the two blocks from the six-block project would increase the cost to $13.20 per frontage foot.

The public hearing closed on the matter several weeks ago but the council chose to hear some remarks from Worden Avenue residents who came before the council to comment on the project.

Lloyd V. Wilson, 1125 Addison Street, urged the council to proceed with the improvement work and suggested that next year some means be found to include the blocks from Shelley to Lytton streets, providing it could not be done this time.

Rollo L. Shaw, 1821 Worden Street, remarked, "I'm for paving the town, let's get the whole job done."

George Knight, 1516 Worden Avenue, also favored the project.

Following comments from the audience, the council voted on the ordinance with Walter Fleet and Chet Hamaker dissenting while Lyle Kellstrom, Jim Barnes and Ladd Hoyt assented.

Later during the session, Kyle submitted the plans and specifications for the Worden Avenue project as it had originally been proposed and the council approved it unanimously.

The council indicated that a public hearing would be held on the subject July 1 in the council chambers.

That date was also the time set for public hearings on two other street improvement projects.

The street jobs consisted of the Calhoun Street and Birch Street projects, which were introduced to the council when Kyle presented the plans, specifications and cost estimates of each project to the group.

On another matter, the council transferred title to a parcel of land in the vicinity of the sewerage disposal plant, on the east shore of Lake Ewauna, to the Modoc Lumber Company. The city acquired the property from the lumber company some years ago to prepare for the possibility that it might become necessary to expand its sewer treatment plant. Such expansion is no longer foreseen and the land has been returned to the original owner.

Mention of the lumber firm recalled to some members of the council that protests had been received charging that the company was stacking lumber at the end of Second Street.

Kellstrom stated, "People are complaining that there is so much lumber out there, they can't tell where the street begins or ends."

Fleet added, "Several years ago we allowed them (the company) the use of a portion of Oak Street if they would keep the loads on pallets. But they were not to use Second Street," he stressed.

Mayor Robert Veatch said he would contact representatives of the company and discuss the matter with them.

The council then approved the sale of Lot 18, Block 8, El Dorado Addition to the Horton and Berco Company.

In other business the city council:

- Awarded a contract to the A. H. Patterson Company for the construction of a storm sewer to serve the area east of Washburn Way to Shasta Way. Bids were opened May 29 when the Patterson firm submitted the low bid of slightly less than $30,000.
- Conducted the first and second readings of an ordinance calling for bids on the construction of a proposed storm sewer for a portion of the Mountain View and El Dorado additions. Eventually, the system may be extended to that part of the Mountain View Addition near Crest Street, City Manager Bob Kyle said.
- Granted a variance to Harvey Martin for Lot 770, Block 106 of the Mills Addition, following a public hearing in which no one appeared to protest the request.
- Opened a public hearing on the condemnation of buildings located on Lot 1, Block 53 of the Hot Springs Second Addition. Dr. Phillip Cole, owner of several condemned dwellings on Michigan Avenue, indicated he would restore one of the buildings in accordance with the city building code.
- Completed the third and final reading of an ordinance condemning other buildings in the same addition. The structures are located on Lot 2, Block 53 and are the property of A. D. Lambert.
- Approved the third and final reading of an ordinance vacating a portion of Henry Street, near Dixon Street.
- Passed a resolution closing Uerling Street between Second and Third streets and authorized the City Parks and Recreation Department to use the block for the establishment of a city park.
- Concurred with a recommendation of City Attorney Henry Perkins that a public hearing be closed on the condemnation of dangerous buildings on Lot 9, Block 22 of the Indiana Addition. Perkins told the council he had learned that the owner, Mary Hatfield, was deceased and stated that her heirs had 20 days in which to redeem the property.
- Called for bids for the Laguna Street project, from Old Fort Road to Huron Street. The bid opening is set for July 1.
- Completed the third and final

County Board Members Warn Of Rural Rancor

Two members of the Committee to Oppose Consolidation spoke Monday night at a meeting in Shasta School and declared emphatically that there would not be a single benefit for the rural people under a single district plan.

Addressing an audience of about 40 persons were committee members "Buz" Wagner and Ted Hyde who have been speaking against single district consolidation and for some kind of gerrymander plan for several months now.

A third committee member, Ben Adair, who moderated Monday night's session, said the public was invited to the meeting to listen to the facts, "as near as we know them."

Hyde emphasized that the committee that is opposed to county-wide reorganization is not comprised of "a bunch of antis." "We are interested in finding the most prompt and fair solution to the overcrowded condition at KU," Hyde said.

"Recently enacted (May 13) state legislation has provided the vehicle by which the people in Klamath County can reorganize in any fashion they wish, one, two, three or any number of districts," Hyde said.

Hyde was referring to Senate Bill 287 which became effective May 13 amending the school reorganization act and repealing the law that excluded Klamath County from the reorganization act.

Another school bill passed recently was Carroll Howe's House Bill 1536 which made it possible for territory to be taken from a county unit district and added to another school district.

"The joint school boards in their meetings over the last few months discussed other types of reorganization that would provide fewer tax inequities, less waste, a more prompt solution to the KU problem, and less rancor on the part of the rural people than the proposed reorganization would provide," Hyde emphasized.

Now the enabling legislation has been provided and the people can choose any of the solutions previously discussed by the school boards, he said.

"The 10 man board under county-wide reorganization during the first year of operation would be a board of conflict because of the rancor that would exist among the rural people," Wagner said.

"The problem is really the KU board's problem and the rural people would be pulled into it just to get their tax support. All that we have is a problem at KU, there is no problem at Bly for instance, we're doing the best we can with what we have in Bly," Wagner said.

During the question and answer period Ben Adair indicated that if reorganization passed it would create hard feelings among the rural people.

Mrs. Beth Binford, 5241 Alva Avenue, said none of the people she talked with in the rural area indicated that they would try to hinder school operations if the proposal passed. She asked Adair exactly who is making this threat.

"The people in the rural area are," Adair said.

Mrs. Binford asked how two unified 1-12a district could be formed under a gerrymander plan.

Wagner answered that once the KU burden is relieved by the county taking some of the suburban students, then the people in the city can petition under the new law to reorganize within the city.

Firemen Begin Calling On Home Fire Hazards

Firemen of the Klamath Falls Fire Department began calling at homes in the Hot Springs Addition Monday for their annual home safety inspection service to residents of Klamath Falls. Fire Marshal William Ackerman reported Tuesday.

Until further notice, the inspections will be held twice weekly in the Hot Springs Addition, later in the Hillside Addition, and finally in the western section of Klamath Falls.

The home inspections are being conducted to advise residents of fire hazards which may be present in their homes and to check the rooms in each dwelling inspected against a list of such hazards.

The service may be performed only upon the consent of the resident of each home and includes an inspection by firemen of all floors, the attic and roof of a dwelling, in addition to the garage and yard.

Among some of the items checked are flammable liquids improperly stored, improper location of painting materials and oily rags, combustibles too near heating devices, unsafe masonry chimneys, overloading of electric circuits, arrangement of TV and radio sets, and unsafe structural conditions.

At the conclusion of the tour of a house, the inspecting firemen will present the resident with a check list noting the fire hazards, if any, existing in the dwelling.

In addition to the home safety program firemen will also call at local businesses to learn the location of electrical cut-off power switches and take note of other items, the knowledge of which may be invaluable in the event of a fire.

The fire department seeks the cooperation of each resident in eliminating or correcting any hazard which may be noted in an inspection.

Lisle and Marion Pratt have filed a complaint at the County Clerk's office charging that a contract and escrow instructions between them and J. W. Long and Louise E. Long be amended. In the complaint, they charge that "the defendants have refused and neglected to adjust the contract and escrow instructions to conform to the original intent of the parties."

The suit involves the sale of a lot in Lakewood Heights by the plaintiffs to the defendants and is not a foreclosure.

U.S. Roads
