

Lunchtime Romancing Carried To Extreme?

By ANN LANDERS
Dear Ann Landers: I have a delicate problem and don't know where else to go for help. I can't discuss this with our clergyman or our doctor as we are well known in the community and if this story got out my husband would be furious.

good you need not worry. If it has not been good, worrying won't help.
Don't deny your daughter the opportunity to get a college education. Send her, with no restrictions. Quit nagging. Tell her you have faith and confidence and that you know she will never let you down.

We've been married 12 years and have five lovely children. I have part-time help, which is all I want because I believe a mother should raise her own children. My husband owns a small but profitable business near our home. About a year ago he got into the habit of "dropping in" for lunch about twice a week. Now he's home for lunch five times a week and it's driving me crazy. I don't mind fixing him a sandwich and coffee, but he follows me around the kitchen with that come-hither look in his eye and when his mind is made up, it's made up.

Dear Ann: I'm a young widow who is going with an attractive bachelor—object matrimony.
Gordon's mother lives in another state. She wanted to come here for a 10-day visit and Gordon asked me if I would have her as my houseguest. I have plenty of room as well as a competent maid. I agreed, thinking it might boost my stock with Gordon.

Gordon is a great golfer and likes to play cards with the boys. While his mother was in town he spent only three evenings with us. I do not want his mother in my home for eight weeks but I'm afraid to say no because it may wreck my chances with him. Help. Please—DESPERATE
Dear Desperate: Say no and don't worry about what it does to your chances. If Gordon wants to marry you he will. If he doesn't, you can wine and dine his mother for 10 years and it won't make any difference.

I love him very much, but 12:30 p.m. is no time for romance with three kids at home for lunch, the doorbell ringing and me trying to get to a 2 p.m. church guild meeting.
I want to be a good wife but I believe there is a time and a place for everything. Please tell me what to do.—FRANTIC AND EXHAUSTED
Dear Frantic and Exhausted: Tell your husband you married him for better or for worse but you didn't marry him for lunch.

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughter is 19, lovely, bright and well-liked. She has had two years of college and is changing. I'm afraid, from an unspooled, fresh young lady to a hard-boiled woman of the world.
She told us last night that she takes a few drinks at school because everyone else does and she sees nothing wrong in it. She doesn't smoke but all the girls around her do, and she sees nothing wrong in that either.
She works during the summer to pay part of her tuition, but we still must make sacrifices to see her through. I told her that unless she would promise not to smoke or drink she may not return to college in the fall.
She says I am not being fair to her—that she must make these decisions herself and they must not be imposed on her. Will you please print your views on this so I can show them to her? I need some help with this headstrong girl.—TRULY WORRIED
Dear Mother: Here it is but when you see my advice you may not be so eager to show it to her. A girl of 19 is what she is. Her pattern is set and you will not change it. If her training has been

JFK Says Mankind Now Has Ability To Banish World Hunger

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy said today that for the first time mankind now has the ability to banish hunger from the earth. Thus, he said, the world must be balanced on efforts to assure "a balanced and adequate diet" for everyone.
Kennedy proposed "five basic guidelines" toward that end, starting with the basic fact that "the persistence of hunger is unacceptable either morally or socially."

In a speech prepared for the opening session of the World Food Congress, Kennedy pledged full American support for a campaign to "outlaw and banish hunger" in the face of a worldwide population explosion that has intensified the problem.
United Nations Secretary General Thant also spoke at the first session and called for a 2 to 5 per cent annual increase in the world's food production to feed its expanding population.
Thant said there was a "paradox of poverty in the midst of plenty, of famine or near-famine side-by-side with surpluses, a paradox which represents, let us admit, such a reproach to our present day world."

statement prepared for the Congress that:
"Peace and stability can never be maintained in this world if more than half of its population have to remain hungry throughout the year."
R.R. Sen, FAO director-general, also told the 1,000 delegates that they might be shaping world history by helping draft a blueprint for a better-fed world.
Sen said estimates indicated four-fold by the year 2000 to meet the needs of a world population which is expected to double by that time. He said that food production in the world's developing nations would have to be increased three-to that time.

Officials Debate CD Cut

NEW YORK (UPI)—Mayor Terry Schiavo and City Commissioner Stanley Earl of Portland, appeared on television today in a debate over that city's cutting out funds for civil defense.
The Portland City Council voted two weeks ago to knock out CD funds. Schiavo cast the only vote in favor of CD.
They appeared on the Columbia Broadcasting System program calendar.
Earl said the only defense against the hydrogen bomb was peace and that people had been given a false sense of security about fallout shelters.
"When you get people feeling that they have salvation in a fallout shelter, they might think you can take a nuclear war," Earl said.
Schiavo reiterated that in his opinion civil defense was better than nothing. "I can't see shooting the dog just to get rid of a couple of ticks," he said.
"That same dignity—in the 20th century certainly — requires the elimination of large scale hunger and starvation," Kennedy said. He then listed these other guidelines:
— "We must recognize the fact that food deficient nations, with assistance from other countries, can solve their own food problems."

—"International cooperation, international organization and international action are indispensable."
—"No single technique of politics, finance, or education can, by itself, eliminate hunger" but coordinated efforts are needed by everyone.
—"World opinion must be concentrated upon the international effort to eliminate hunger as a primary task of this generation."
President Sarvepalli Radhakrishnan of India, sharing in the opening ceremonies, warned in a
