EXTREMELY RARE VIEW—This view of forbidden Tibet was taken from 29,028-foot Mt. Everest, highest point on earth, by Barry C. Bishop, National Geographic Society staff member and a member of the society's American Mt. Everest Expedition. Bishop and his climbing partner, Luther G. Jerstad, of Eugene, reached the summit. Looking northwestward from Everest, the serpentine strip from the middle foreground to right background is the Rongbuk Glacier.

Little Dishonest Americans Cause Hotels Huge Losses

FRENCH LICK, Ind. (UPI)—Ind., said the most common article left behind by a man is his electric shaver cord. Americans turn slightly dishonest and forgetful when checking out.

The American Hotel Association declined to give an estimate of total loss. But hotel executives report it "runs into a few million" each year for the industry to replace stolen articles and forward forgotten ones.

Lifted items range from Gideon Bibles to desk pens. About the only thing a husband and wife never forget in the rush of packing one another.

Mrs. Hazel McIntosh, housekeeper at the Sheraton Hotel group's branch in French Lick, Ind., said the most common article left behind by a man is his electric shaver cord.

Cosmetics and lotions, usually kept in the hotel bathroom medicine chest, are left behind by many women.

Both sexes are adept at forgetting sleeping garments.

Slippers, pushed under beds, often are left behind by both sexes. Ditto for tooth brushes and medicines.

What's the oddest item ever left behind? Mrs. McIntosh noted a pair of false teeth she said were "in good condition."

She stored them for three years, but the owner never asked for them.

Hotel security plans include name-stamping on glasses, blankets, sheets and the like, use of oversized pictures that won't fit into suitcases and bolts to anchor television sets.

Tubes are removed from television sets. Radios disappear. So do blankets. Sterling silver in dining rooms is a favorite target.

One New York hotel lost so many sterling demi-tasse spoons it finally switched to plastic spoons and urged guests to take them as souvenirs.

As noted, Gideon Bibles still disappear. Even that doesn't deter Mrs. McIntosh's basic belief in the honesty of the human race.
