Trump Break Uncertain

By OSWALD JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

The late George S. Kaufman was discussing a certain bridge player.

He remarked, "There are two ways to tell when Mr. X has a good hand. First his face lights up and then he misplays it."

South looked like a lighted Christmas tree as he opened with one spade and after North responded with two clubs, South moved happily to the spade slam.

West opened the king of diamonds. South took dummy's ace and after mentioning the fact that he was glad he had not bid seven South played dummy's deuce of spades. East played low and South went up with his ace.

West showed out and the Christmas tree lights were short-circuited. The rosy glow turned to a deep purple as South studied the hand but there was nothing he could do to salvage anything from the wreck. He had to lose a club and a trump.

If South had done his thinking trick he would have done all right. He would have seen that his only worry was a five-zero trump break and that he could handle it if East held the five trumps.

Then he would have played dummy's jack of spades. West would show out and South would lead a low spade. If East played low, South would finesse the eight. If East played the ten or nine, South would cover and go back to dummy for a further finesse.

What do you do?

A—Pass. You have asked your partner to bid and he has merely gone to four clubs. There is no reason to expect that his hand is strong enough to make game opposite yours.

TODAY'S QUESTION

You pass and West doubles. What do you do after North and East pass?

Barton Explains Difficulties That Current Legislature Faced

Editor's Note: The following review for the 1963 Oregon Legislature was written expressly for UPI by Clarence Barton, D-Coquille, speaker of the House of Representatives. His opinion: "A good, fruitful session."

By Clarence Barton
Written for United Press International

SALEM (UPI)—The 52nd legislative assembly was — as has been so often written—the longest in state history. There was a reason: The problems it faced were the greatest confronted by any Oregon Legislature.

The state's coffers were empty and we could foresee a deficit in excess of $5 million when the legislature convened.

Governor Hatfield had submitted a budget calling for expenditures of $426 million from the general fund, with about $20 million of it to be raised by borrowing if the people approved a bond program.

It appeared that the legislature must increase state taxes by $60 million. The size of the boost loomed large for a state used to living off wartime surpluses, with taxes at a level below expenditures.

The legislative assembly succeeded in meeting the deficit by transferring to the general fund money which had been loaned to the veterans sinking fund. But meeting the need for $60 million more in revenue was not so simple.

I believe that the new tax program which resulted is equitable. It leaves our personal taxes based squarely on ability to pay; it calls for a slight increase in taxes on the largest corporations while simplifying the corporate excise tax law in a way which should make Oregon more attractive to large industries; and it provides revenue to pursue publicly worthwhile services for the next two years.

The two things of which I am most proud are two things which didn't pass. The House can take credit for both:

1. We successfully resisted imposition of a sales tax. The proposed sales taxes were sales taxes on some people — not all people. By this device its backers hoped to lull the people into accepting it after which they could broaden it out in succeeding legislatures. Had an honest, all-inclusive sales tax been proposed, I believe the House would have gone along with referring it to the people. We just wanted to make sure the people knew what they were voting on.

2. The house defeated the so-called three-way bill decimating the state industrial accident commission, which has operated so well since 1913. This bill would have been a bonanza to the insurance industry at the expense of Oregon employers, and ultimately at the expense of injured workers. I have never seen such brazen lobbying as went into the effort to pass this bill, and at one time nearly had to clear the gallery of one lobbyist who was trying to interfere with debate on the floor.

In addition, these were among the more noteworthy legislative accomplishments:

—Governor Hatfield's $426 million budget was trimmed to $404.2 million. This $21.8 million cut was at no loss in essential services.

—After many sessions of struggle, a reasonable home property tax relief bill for senior citizens with low income was passed. —A new basic school support formula was approved. At the same time, state aid to local public schools was boosted to $141.2 million, which will account for 36 per cent of the primary and secondary school operating costs.

—One of the House's great victories was in overcoming Senate roadblocks to more fair compensation for academic staff in the state colleges and universities and for civil service personnel.

—A beginning toward executive reorganization was accomplished by creating a Department of Commerce, to gather in a myriad of scattered state services.

—What may turn out to be a model program for the identification and treatment of sexual deviates was enacted. A test of time is needed before we brag overmuch, however.

The great disappointment of this session was the Senate's refusal to refer the proposed new constitution to the people. I hope that with more study — and with some new faces in the Senate — we can accomplish constitutional modernization in 1965.

This has been a good, fruitful session for the people of the state, both from the standpoint of what was done and what was defeated.

This is due entirely to the excellent work of most legislators, especially in House committees.

Experienced observers say they and so little grandstanding. As never saw so much hard work/veteran of four terms, I agree.

William Tugman Park Dedicated

REEDSPORT, Ore. (UPI)—The William M. Tugman State Park was dedicated to the memory of the late editor and conservationist Thursday by some 200 persons.

The park is located on Eel Lake, about eight miles south of here. It was developed jointly on 481 acres of land by the State Highway Commission and State Game Commission.

Tugman was editor of the Eugene Register-Guard for 23 years and later was editor and publisher of the weekly Port Umpqua Courier here. He died in May, 1961. He was the first chairman of the State Parks and Recreation Commission.

Principal speakers at the dedication were Wayne Nunn, administrative assistant to Gov. Mark Hatfield; John Amacher, a member of the game commission, and Alfred Collier of the State Parks and Recreation Advisory Committee.

Keep Fit With MILK

It's the Pitcher of Health

June Dairy Month, the nation's annual salute to the dairy industry, is an excellent time for homemakers to remember that milk helps keep people fit. The 27th anniversary of this nationwide dairy foods campaign serves as a fitting backdrop to highlight the importance of milk, exercise and a balanced diet.

"I have long been convinced that milk is an important aid to good health," commented President Kennedy at the Milk and Nutrition Conference held in Washington, D.C. last year. "If we are going to be a vigorous and vital nation as we all desire, then, of course, we must depend on the consumption of a balanced diet. And milk must be a part of it."

Keeping fit isn't merely doing daily push-ups and drinking sauerkraut juice. A well balanced diet plays a major role in physical fitness. Add to this a sensible program of exercise all through life and moderation in all things.
