

Court Again Cuts Rights Of States In Crime Fight

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The freedom of states to fight crime in their own way was further reduced today by a Supreme Court decision requiring federal standards of "reasonableness" for searches and seizures.

The 8-1 ruling Monday was the last in a series of state criminal procedures which the high court has handed down this term.

In previous decisions the court required appointment of a lawyer for all persons charged with serious offenses who cannot afford to pay and for indigents who want to appeal their conviction. The court also said that rules governing free transcripts of court proceedings must give penniless and wealthy defendants an even break.

The court ruled in another case that an inmate of a state prison could challenge his detention in a federal court action even though he did not previously take every avenue of appeal in state courts.

Heard Next Term

The Supreme Court handed down its search and seizure ruling along with the announcement that it would consider more sit-in cases next term as well as more ramifications of both federal and state legislative reapportionment.

The current term is expected to end with next Monday's opinions, which are likely to include one on the use of the Lord's Prayer and Bible reading as opening devotions in public schools.

Justice Tom C. Clark spoke for an eight-man majority on the new search and seizure rules. The dissenter, Justice John M. Harlan, described them as "uncalled for and unwise."

Lists Requirements

The Fourth Amendment to the U. S. Constitution provides that "the right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched and the persons or things to be seized."

All federal searches and seizures must be geared to these requirements.

As a result of Monday's decision the state requirements are now the same.

12 Killed, 34 Injured On Scout Expedition

ESCALANTE, Utah (UPI)—The harsh, rocky mountainside was covered by brown camping equipment and bright yellow rubber boats. And by the bodies of 12 persons as tragedy ended a Boy Scout outing into rugged southeastern Utah.

The bodies were of nine Scouts, two university professors and a woman reporter who, along with 34 others who were injured, were tossed in all directions when their truck plunged down a precipitous mountainside.

The day that had started so joyfully for the Scouts—just out of school for their summer vacation—thus ended mournfully on a lonely, primitive road in the "man's land" 35 miles southeast of here.

When Garfield County deputies arrived at the scene four hours after the accident, they found the dead and injured pinned beneath the open-bed truck and buried under their camping equipment and rubber boats.

Young David Hall of Provo, one of the injured, described the accident: "The truck wouldn't shift and started rolling backwards and everyone started screaming. Everyone got tossed around, but I was lucky."

Up Rough Road

Garfield County Sheriff George Middleton said as the truck headed up a rough road carved out of the mountainside, the driver tried to shift gears and the vehicle began rolling backward. Then the brakes failed and the truck spilled over the end of the road, tossing the passengers in its open-bed down a steep precipice.

The Scouts, their leaders, the woman reporter and a group of girls who "hitched" a ride were headed for Hole-in-the-Rock on the Colorado River. There they were to meet another group of Scouts who had hit the river farther north. The two Scout groups then planned to float down the Roily River to "crossing of the fathers."

Rescue operations began after two of the injured boys, Bryan Rountly and Tom Heal of Provo, walked back along the trail toward Escalante until they met a rancher who brought them here.

The trip into the remote and rugged area was planned and sponsored by Socotwa Expedition Corp., which provides tours for Mormon youngsters.

The fatalities included seven Scouts from Provo, Utah, and one each from Ogden, Utah, and Salt Lake City. Most of them were members of the (Mormon) Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (LDS).

The terrain, which ranges in altitude from 4,000 to 9,000 feet, is barren and mountainous, with rocky escarpments thrusting through the sterile soil.

Road Is Rough

The road from Escalante to Hole-in-the-Rock, the Scouts' destination on the Colorado River, is nothing more than two tire tracks cut out by Mormon pioneers nearly a century ago and improved little since then.

The most seriously injured youths were taken to Panquitch Hospital, about 100 miles from the accident scene. The facility is equipped for only 10 patients; the less seriously hurt were sent to the closest hamlets.

Two Brigham Young University professors, both Scout leaders, were among the victims. Merlin J. Shaw, 51, an assistant professor of religion and bishop of the Manabu LDS Ward, was in charge of the Provo contingent of Scouts. H. Darrell Taylor, 45, chairman of the BYU language department, was explorer adviser.

Dorothy Hansen, 24, a reporter for the Deseret News and Salt Lake Telegram, also was killed.

Dig your toes in the cool, wet sand

Who can resist it? That exuberant urge to peel off your shoes and go joyfully down to meet the sea. You don't want anything, ever, to spoil that lovely beach...neither do we.

So today, with advanced drilling techniques, we seek oil beneath beaches without marring their beauty with equipment and derricks.

Instead, the oil is brought up by "slant drilling" from a well located far away, often out in the sea. On the beach, you don't even know it's happening.

So dig your toes in the cool, wet sand. Enjoy your lovely seaside playgrounds. We cherish their beauty, as you do.
