

Physical Attraction Confused With Love

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I hope you will print this letter from a "young fossil" to prove to adults that all teen-agers are not nutty. I'm not the only one in our school who agrees with you that boys and girls should not be holding hands or walking with their arms around each other in school corridors or on the street.

Fellows who have genuine respect for their girls keep their hands to themselves in public. Girls who allow themselves to be pawed look plain cheap.

The teen-ager who wrote, "When two people love each other it is perfectly O.K. to let the whole world know" must have rocks in her head. What do 15 and 16-year-old kids know about love? As a teen-ager I can tell you that what they think is love is only physical attraction.

If kids want to be treated as adults they ought to learn the meaning of words. — ALSO A TEEN

Dear Ann: I'm always a treat to get a letter from a teen-ager which reflects solid thinking. I received many letters from high school kids who expressed this point of view, but yours was the greatest.

Dear Ann Landers: We were childhood for 12 years. Then as if by a miracle I gave birth to a darling baby girl.

Lisa is 18 months old and my husband refuses to allow me to engage a woman or a sitter. If we receive an invitation which does not include the baby we cannot accept. If we go to the movies we take Lisa along. We've never been away from her for even one evening.

I am worried because Lisa is terribly afraid of strangers and will have nothing to do with anyone outside the immediate family. My husband claims we had so many years of gadding about that we should be content to stay at home.

Frankly, I'm dying to get out for an evening. I would settle for once a month.—M AND D

Dear M and D: Young children must learn to get along with people outside the family. The fact that Lisa at 18 months is afraid of strangers proves she already is having emotional problems.

By all means start to go out one evening every other week and don't let her tyrannize you into staying home. Just say goodbye and leave.

Dear Ann: I'm having real trouble with my 20-year-old daughter. She is attractive, bright and holds a high-paying job.

Stephanie has been going with a divorced man who says he is 32. He looks 42. She met him at work and has fallen hard. The man's wife was a tramp and he has custody of their four children. The youngest is only two years old. A housekeeper takes care of the children.

Stephanie has gone with this man for only 2½ months and he has asked her to marry him. I'm afraid he is looking for a mother for his children rather than a wife. Every weekend when the housekeeper is off she goes to his home and works like a horse.

Stephanie says I must allow her to lead her own life. I'm a widow and she insists I am hanging on to her because she is all I have. This is not true—I want her to marry somebody, but I want it to be a good marriage, and I don't think this is right for her.—SAD MOM

Dear Mom: A 20-year-old girl who takes on a 32-year-old man with four children after only 2½ months of courtship could be making a big mistake.

Ask her to give the romance another six months. I'm betting if you keep mum and not put her in the position where she must defend her choice, she'll break it off.

It's hard for a mother to remain silent in such circumstances, but silence is your best ally.

Are you tempted to smoke because the crowd does? If so, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Teen-age Smoking," enclosing with your request 10 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Prune Crop Very Light

CORVALLIS (UPI)—The Western Oregon prune crop is nearly non-existent, according to the Oregon Livestock and Crop Reporting Service.

Rainy weather during the entire bloom period prevented pollination and fruit set, the agency said today. Only in young orchards in Umatilla County were prospects considered good.

Cold spring weather also caused severe drops in other fruit prospects. The Oregon sweet cherry crop was forecast for 18,000 tons, down 45 per cent from last year. Wasco County had better prospects.

The sour cherry crop was expected to be down some 23 per cent from 1962 because of cold weather during the bloom period and the pear crop in the Jackson County area was also expected to be down one third from 1962—17 per cent below the five-year average.

Bartlett production in Southwest Oregon was expected to drop one-fourth of the 1962 crop. The Hood River crop had a good forecast, however.

COMING HERE — Linda and Cotton Rosser, operators of the Flying U Rodeo Company, will be on hand for the Klamath Basin Roundup. The company will supply stock for the July event. Linda is an excellent rider and is featured in the grand entries.

Rodeo Company Bringing Large Herd For Roundup

The Flying U Rodeo Company of Marysville, Calif., and Fallon, Nev., will provide stock for this year's Klamath Basin Roundup scheduled July 2, 3 and 4. It was announced by committee members.

Owned by Cotton Rosser, former intercollegiate riding champion, the Flying U consists of 5,200 acres of both summer and winter range.

A busy schedule averaging more than 30 rodeos a year (12 this season) has prompted the owner to build a proven herd of nearly 90 bucking bulls, about 35 bareback horses, and more than 40 saddle broncs.

During this season Rosser will produce rodeos in six western states, climaxed by the famed San Francisco Cow Palace event in November.

Buying trips are made several times each year to rodeo centers throughout the west to keep bucking stock standards high. Rosser also travels to Mexico at least once annually to arrange for purchase of Mexican steers, used in roping and bulldogging events.

Assisting him is his wife, Linda, an accomplished horsewoman who is usually seen as flag-bearer in grand entries, and Buster and June Ivory of Pampa, Tex., who act as special representative and rodeo secretary, respectively.

The crew travels in a P-35 Bonanza airplane from show to show minus the company of Ivory, who sticks to the ground in supervision of stock hauling in huge, blue and white Flying U trucks and trailers.

Portland (UPI)—Seven men have been released on their own recognizance after pleading innocent to mail fraud charges stemming from an Oregon land development project.

The men were indicted by a federal grand jury May 31. They entered pleas Thursday and trial was set for Oct. 15 in U.S. District Court.

The defendants are Richard D. Walker, Los Angeles; George E. Isaacs, Glendale, Calif.; Maurice A. Hall, Beverly Hills, Calif.; Abraham Koolish, Winnetka, Ill.; David F. Koolish, Winnetka, Ill.; John M. Phillips, Evanston, Ill.; and Jack Cherbo, Chicago.

The indictment charged them with using deceptive literature depicting lakes, mountains and water sports activities to sell 7,000 acres of desert land in the Lake Valley area of Harney County.

The sale price was $395 an acre. Justice Department officials and local authorities estimated the land's value at $20 an acre.

Federal Judge Gus J. Solomon granted the seven 20 days in which to file motions in the case and gave them permission to return to their home states.

SALEM (UPI)—Humidity regulations were issued, effective at midnight Friday, for forest operations close-down zones 10 and 11. The Lane County-Willamette National Forest area.

The State Forestry Department predicted logging shutdowns were likely.

Under the regulations, logging operations must stop when the humidity drops below 30 per cent. The forestry department said a high pressure ridge offshore is causing a warming and drying trend that is expected to continue through Sunday.

Zones 3, 8 and 9 already are under humidity regulations. These areas include part of Tillamook County, and the Cascades from Marion County to the Columbia River.

Initial Father's Day Observed In Spokane

By MRS. JOE SMITH
Vice President and Chairman
Father of the Year Committee
Klamath County Cow Belles

The first celebration of Father's Day was held in Spokane in June, 1910, when Mrs. John Bruce Dodd started it as a tribute to her own father, who had raised his motherless family alone and without help.

A dispatch in the Portland Oregonian May 18, 1913, gives the impression that it originated there. The article states that a suggestion made by Rev. J. H. Berringer, pastor of the Irvington Methodist Church of Vancouver, was followed by special Father's Day services in his church, thus establishing a custom which might "become a national one."

In 1920, Harry C. Meek, president of the Uptown Lions Club of Chicago, was able to bring about the observance of a day in honor of fathers on the third Sunday in October.

President Wilson, before this, had recognized Father's Day by pressing a button which unfurled a flag on the platform at a Spokane celebration. Mrs. Dodd, according to an article by G. W. Douglas in his "American Book of Days," as a result of these Spokane celebrations, had organized a Father's Day association.

About 1923, Mrs. Walter Hamlet Burgess of Cheltenham, Pennsylvania, had taken out a charter for a National Father's Day and registered the name, as she thought her idea was an original one. When she later heard of Mrs. Dodd's activities, she withdrew her claim as the founder of Father's Day.

In Augusta, Ga., Dec. 13, 1954, George Basman died at 89, and in 1921 he was given the credit for being among the first to suggest a "Father's Day."

So as is the case with many good ideas and inventions, within a 10-year span many individuals throughout the United States were trying to find some means to give honor and credit to the fathers of the nation.

It is interesting to note that of all the references to the establishment of Father's Day, only President Coolidge in 1921, when he wrote to Mr. Meek, stressed the duties and responsibilities of being a father when he said, "As I have indicated heretofore, the widespread observance of this occasion is calculated to establish more intimate relations between fathers and their children, and also to impress upon fathers the full measure of their obligations."

When the Klamath County Cow Belles were organized in 1954, they soon entered wholeheartedly into selecting a Klamath County father whom they could honor each year. Youth groups also gladly helped them by nominating fathers of their acquaintance for this honor. Among the men in the past so honored have been John P. Heyden, Ralph Hill, John P. Kerns, Bill Milne, and last year's winner, Mr. Buck.

This year the Chiloquin Scout Troop, whose leader is Frank Hale, the principal of the grade school, sent in the name of Warren Wilder of Fort Klamath known to his many friends and admirers as Lefty Wildeagle. His name and qualifications went to the judges (in Lakeview), along with the other nominees, and he was selected as Klamath County's 1963 Father of the Year.

At a luncheon meeting of the Cow Belles in May, Mr. Wilder was presented with a plaque and a certificate for the purchase of beef, which is the food favored by fathers.

Lefty Wildeagle, accompanied by his wife, Genie, arrived at the luncheon dressed in full regalia. He is a proud member of the Karok tribe of Northern California, having been born 53 years ago at the mouth of the Klamath River, near the ocean. He said that when he went into battle, or into any dangerous situation, they dressed in their best "so as to be ready to meet their Maker." As he was the only man present, until the photographer arrived, he evidently considered himself in a dangerous situation.

He told the Cow Belles of his education at the Chemawa Indian School near Salem, where Indian young people from all over the country were educated.

After graduating, he worked at the school for nine years teaching arts and crafts, and as a director of athletics. Later he graduated from the advertising and art school in Portland.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilder moved to Klamath County about 1952. Their family consists of three sons and a nephew, whom they raised as their own. The Wilders operate a service station and art museum and Indian gift shop at Fort Klamath.

The 1963 Klamath County "Father of the Year" has been very active in youth activities and very well thought of in his community. He was Boy Scout leader for many years and now serves as a consultant to them throughout the state on Indian lore and history.

He is now chairman of the school board in Chiloquin, and active in Indian ceremonies and festivals in many places in the West. He has trained a group to put on Indian dances and these are given many places. He is also vice president of the Chiloquin PTA, and is a sponsor of the Little League ball club for boys.

Wildeagle says that his favorite way of cooking beef is like the early Indians cooked buffalo — boiled, or laced on sticks and broiled beside the camp fire.

We, of the Klamath County Cow Belles, are proud that our 1963 Klamath County Father of the Year is a representative of one of the tribes that in the early days roamed the Klamath River country.

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI)—Thomas Greaney and his wife were free on $70 bail today pending a court appearance Monday on his drunken driving charge.

Mrs. Greaney was involved after he told the court that he failed to show up for a hearing scheduled Wednesday because "my wife told me not to come."

The new Theodore Roosevelt memorial is being erected on an island in the Potomac which bears his name and it is hoped the gigantic memorial area will be completed for the 100th birthday of the man it honors, in 1969.

AWAITS HUGE CARGO — This modified Boeing Stratocruiser, called the "pregnant guppy," will carry part of the Saturn I space vehicle. The cargo weighs 20,379 pounds. This will be the largest cargo ever transported by airplane. The flight will be the beginning of loaded flight tests for the Federal Aviation Agency and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Plane Builder Back At Work

FRANKFURT, Germany (UPI)—The man the Germans fondly call "Professor Willy" — the man who might have won the war for Adolf Hitler, and almost did — is back in business again making deadly fighter planes.

Professor Willy is airplane designer Wilhelm Messerschmitt whose "ME's" — the 109 and 110 — were the scourge of the skies for the first years of World War II.

A blind spot in the thinking of the German air high command delayed for more than two precious wartime years the most fearsome Messerschmitt of them all, the ME262 jet fighter that entered the war in 1944—too late to be fully effective.

Dismissed As Joke
Messerschmitt has said since that he had his first jet planned as early as 1933 and submitted the completed design to the German Air Ministry in 1941. But the "propellerless" plane was brushed aside as "a joke... pure nonsense."

Professor Willy maintains he never has courted publicity. When he went to Spain to make 300-miles-an-hour cannon-carrying planes, after Hitler's Germany was in ashes, he stayed away from reporters. No photographer yet has caught the professor in could have had his jets in mass production in 1942. History might have been different if he had.

Now the tall, wiry professor appears to be ahead of his time again. This month West Germany unveiled the vertical takeoff jet fighter, VJ101. Experts say it can muster greater power and range than present British and French models, and that Professor Willy has on the drawing board an even faster, stronger and better one—with a speed twice that of sound.

Avoids Publicity
There wasn't too much fanfare or even attention paid the day Professor Willy's new plane made its public debut. It was the day American Major L. Gordon Cooper went into space and the headlines went to him.

But Professor Willy didn't mind. He never has courted publicity. When he went to Spain to make 300-miles-an-hour cannon-carrying planes, after Hitler's Germany was in ashes, he stayed away from reporters. No photographer yet has caught the professor in

Match Point Double Rare

By OSWALD JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

One duplicate bid that practically never makes its appearance in rubber bridge is the so-called match point double.

West's takeout double was very weak distributionally, but he did have three defensive tricks.

North's immediate heart bid was made in anticipation of spade bidding by the opposition and eventually North bid three diamonds over East's two spades.

East doubled this. He decided that if South could make three diamonds South would do pretty well match-pointwise and that while the double would increase South's point score from 110 to 670 in the event that South could make three diamonds it would increase East's point score from 100 to 200 in the event that South was one trick too high and that the match point score would improve from below average to top.

East was right on all counts. Left to himself he would have made two spades for plus 110, he did beat three diamonds because North held the jack instead of South and plus 200 gave him a top score at the Southeastern championships in Miami, Fla.

Incidentally, the double was a good percentage because North and South were vulnerable. If they had not been vulnerable it would have changed the score from 50 to 100 and would not have made much match point difference.
