Four Remaining 'Whiz Kids' Still Put Ideas To Work To Keep Automobile Plant Humming

DETROIT (UPI)—After World War II, 10 young men soon to win the name "whiz kids" swept into the Ford Motor Co. and put their ideas to work.

The survivors now are middle aged, but their ideas still are whizzing. Of the original group, four now are with Ford, including company president Arjay R. Miller. One is dead. Four have gone into other businesses, and one—Robert S. McNamara—is President Kennedy's secretary of defense.

It began in 1946 when four young officers of the Air Corps' Statistical Control Office in the Defense Department debated what they would do in civilian life. They agreed that their experience in developing the statistical control unit had better armed them for a career in the business world than anything they had done before the war.

The original group consisted of Col. Charles B. (Tex) Thornton, head of the Statistical Control Office, F.C. (Jack) Reith, Ben D. Mills and George Moore. When the final 10-man team was assembled it included McNamara, Arjay Miller, James O. Wright, J. Edward Lundy, Charles E. Bosworth and W.R. Anderson.

"We had to discuss the terms of the proposition with all the members of the group several times," said Mills.

Moore quit in 1947, ran a string of Ford and Lincoln-Mercury dealerships and more recently became board chairman of Information for Industries, Inc., Washington.

Thornton dropped out in 1948. He went on to become a vice president at Hughes Aircraft and

Mrs. Kennedy Undecided What To Do With Pups

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy hasn't decided what to do with her dog Pushinka's four new puppies, her press secretary, Pamela Turnure, said today.

The brown puppies—two male and two females—were born last Friday to Pushinka, a gift from Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev.

Pushinka and her pups have been at the White House for two days but the two Kennedy children, five-year-old Caroline and two-year-old John Junior, have not seen them. The children were still at Camp David, the presidential retreat near Thurmond, Md., where they spent the weekend.

Miss Turnure was asked today whether the puppies would be given away. She replied: "Mrs. Kennedy hasn't decided what to do with them."

Counting Caroline's Welsh terrier, Charlie, and the First Lady's police dog, Clipper, there are now seven dogs at the White House.

Watch Traffic Says Auto Club

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—If you find yourself getting drowsy while driving in slow, heavy traffic, you're probably afflicted with more than just boredom.

You are probably getting an overdose of exhaust fumes, according to the National Automobile Club. Tests have shown that a driver following another car closely in heavy traffic can inhale enough carbon monoxide from the car ahead to become distinctly drowsy, the club said.

WINDMILLS

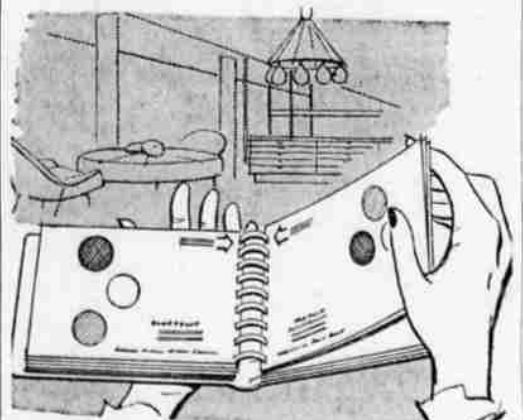

The first detailed description from which a windmill could be built was published in France in 1702. First satisfactory working drawings were published in the Netherlands 25 years later, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica.
