New Program For Wheat Proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., today proposed a wheat program which he said would probably fill President Kennedy's requirements for any new wheat legislation this year.

McGovern said the program of mandatory production controls and high price supports—overwhelmingly rejected by farmers May 21—could be converted with a brief bill into a voluntary compliance program.

Under such a program, he said, farmers choosing to comply with the controls proposed for the 1964 crop would get price supports of about $1.95 a bushel, plus payments for land taken out of grain production.

Those cooperating will get marketing certificates for about three-fourths of their 1964 crop. These certificates, which farmers could sell, would be worth 70 cents a bushel. This would be added to the money the farmers could make either from open market sales or putting the grain under government supports at about $1.25 a bushel.

Other congressional news: Depressed Areas: Senate leaders worked today to try to rescue President Kennedy's depressed areas aid plan from the stunning House upset last week. They scheduled the bill for Senate debate Tuesday, and Democratic Whip Hubert H. Humphrey, Minn., said he hoped it would be approved and receive a "more pleasant experience" when it is returned to the House.

Taxes: Administration forces hoped today to persuade the House Ways and Means Committee to approve heavier taxes on dividends of big stockholders with tax relief for small stockholders. The compromise was expected to be accepted by a close vote.

HOW IT STARTED
When we are said to be "turned down" when we are not allowed to do something, it comes from an allusion to the old English custom of turning a glass upside down when no more drink is desired.

Mile, Just Like Dollar, Seems To Be Shrinking

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The country mile, like the dollar, seems to have shrunk a bit during the past 200 years, according to a top government surveyor.

A recent survey of the historic Mason-Dixon line indicated that a mile went farther during Colonial days.

The men who laid out the boundary between Maryland and Delaware in 1874 and 1765 used a measure that was about 10 to 12 feet longer than the present-day mile.

These figures came from B. J. Meade, chief of the Triangulation branch of the U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey. (CG&S). The federal agency resurveyed the Mason-Dixon line, popularly considered the dividing line between the North and South, during 1861 and 1862.

"Since measurements in the original (Colonial) surveys are fairly consistent, there is some indication that the length of the foot 200 years ago was longer than that today," Meade said in a pa-

Stone Towers In Sardinia Keep Archeologists Guessing

TORRALBA, Sardinia (UPI) — Dotted the rugged Sardinian landscape are about 7,000 remnants of a long-vanished civilization that has had archeologists guessing for years.

Sooner or later every visitor to Sardinia is bound to ask: "What are those stone towers?" "They are Nuraghi," is the usual answer. The questioner commonly learns little more than that they were built by a civilization that inhabited the island thousands of years ago.

Until less than 10 years ago archeologists believed the Nuraghi were built during the Stone Age. But they have since determined they were constructed by a "retarded civilization."

There are about 7,000 of the Nuraghi scattered all over the island of Sardinia off the Italian coast. Basically, they are heavy stones piled on top of each other in a conical shape. There usually is one entrance and no windows.

They are from eight or nine feet to more than 50 feet high. From inside these towers the long gone civilization defended themselves or hid until the enemy had passed. Generally the towers were used only for defense and only occasionally as a home.

Archaeologists have determined that the simpler Nuraghi were constructed from about 1500 to 1000 years before Christ. At that time the Nuragical civilization still was in the Stone Age. The towers built then are small and a simple cone.

For the next 500 years or so the civilization gained ground.

Near this little village in north-central Sardinia is the Nuraghe of Santu Antine (Sardinian dialect for St. Anthony), one of the best preserved latter day towers.

The entire Nuraghi is laid out for a step by step defense — first the outside wall, then the inside. From there they could retreat to the upper story for defense, if need be.

Aside from the towers, the civilization left a few other remnants. Archeologists have uncovered bronze figurines made during the latter years of the civilization. They are statues of warriors, and archers. But they are not of woman unless it involves a woman holding a dead warrior. From this experts say that the women of that civilization were not held in very high standing.

The figurines are surprisingly like modern works. They are long legged and almost realistic.

From all indications, the Romans brought the end of the little developed Nuraghi civilization. Although they kept to the interior of the island, they were gradually absorbed by the people who moved to Sardinia from the Italian mainland.

'Good Play At Columbia

By OSWALD JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.
Just last month I played in Columbia at my first South Carolina tournament. I have never played in a nicer one anywhere and I certainly hope to be back again.

What I believe to be the best hand of the tournament was a four-club contract made by John Myers of Columbia.

West opened the deuce of spades. East won with the ace and continued with the queen in order to force dummy to ruff, but John was not going to fall into that trap. He discarded the deuce of diamonds from dummy.

Then East shifted to the three of diamonds, but John was ready. He rose with the ace just as if he were looking right at East's singleton.

John led the nine of hearts and let it ride to East's queen. Now it did not matter what East did, but actually he led a trump. John won with dummy's king, led the three of trumps to his ace, led a heart to dummy's ace, ruffed out East's king of hearts, returned to dummy with the ten of trumps, discarded his three diamonds on the last three hearts and made the last trick with his last trump.

Incidentally, a diamond shift at trick two instead of the spade continuation would have beaten the contract, but that does not detract one iota from John's play.

Castro Warns U.S., Britain

MIAMI (UPI)—Premier Fidel Castro warned today that his forces will attack any Cuban exile bases set up on British and French islands in the Caribbean.

Speaking to shipyard workers at the northern coastal port of Cardenas, the Cuban leader told France and Britain to "be careful" not to permit his anti-Communist foes to operate from any of their Caribbean dependencies.

He said his troops during the past eight weeks have "liquidated" 14 hands of counter-revolutionaries in Matanzas Province. All were "organized" by the U.S. counter-intelligence agency, he charged.

Haila Stoddard of "The Secret Storm" understudied one of the leads in her first stage show, then played the rule on opening night.
