

Celebration Plans Made For Pontiff

EDITORS NOTE: Following is the second of a three-part series on Pope Paul VI, the man and his origin, his policies and what his pontificate may hold for both the Catholic and non-Catholic world.

POPE PAUL VI
By United Press International.
The mayor of the little village of Concesio put in an urgent telephone call to his counterpart at Sotto il Monte, some 30 miles away in northern Italy.

When the call came through, Mayor Riccardo Giustacchini began shouting excitedly: "We've got a Pope now, too. What did you do to celebrate yours? I need some advice."

For this was the village where on Sept. 26, 1897, Giovanni Battista Montini was born, the second of three sons, to the well-to-do family of Giorgio Montini and Giuditta Alghisi.

Sixty-five years later on June 21, 1963, Montini was chosen supreme pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church. He took the name Paul VI.

Reason For Call
Mayor Giustacchini had reason to put in that urgent telephone call to nearby Sotto il Monte for "expert advice." It was there that the late Pope John XXIII was born 81 years before as Angelo Giuseppe Roncalli. And that little village has never seen such a celebration as when Roncalli was named pontiff in 1958.

Aside from the fact that Montini and Roncalli both grew up in the same area of northern Italy, they were worlds apart in their background.

Roncalli, who died June 3 after a four and a half year reign as pontiff, came from a peasant family of 13 children. His brothers continued to till the soil even after he became Pope.

Montini's family were well-to-do landowners, not nobility but with generations of solid background. He was one of three sons.

While Roncalli's father toiled most of his life to buy a home and a bit of land, Montini's father kept three houses, thousands of acres of land, and was a crusading Catholic journalist and member of the Italian Parliament.

Both Religious
Both families, however, were extremely religious.

Every morning, the front door of the Montini home would be opened by a servant shortly before seven o'clock and the three Montini boys, followed by the mother and father, would come out and walk to the local church for morning Mass.

During the day there were set times devoted to prayers. When the family was at their summer home at nearby Verolavecchia a bell was rung at three o'clock every afternoon.

No matter what they were doing, the boys stopped to pray for a few moments. The daily ringing of the bell was to mark the traditional hour of the death of Christ on the cross on Calvary.

Enters Priesthood
On May 29, 1920, Giovanni Montini was ordained a priest at the cathedral of Brescia.

Later that year he went to Rome, where he continued his studies at the Lombard Seminary of the Gregorian University and at the University of Rome.

In May, 1923, his studies were interrupted for several months when he was sent to Warsaw, Poland, as secretary of the papal nunciature. While there he added Polish to his growing list of languages. He speaks, in addition to his native Italian, English, French, German, Spanish, and the language of the church, Latin.

In the autumn he returned to Rome and again took up his studies. A year later he entered into regular service in the Vatican secretariat of state and in 1925 was named a clerk there.

Coast Limit Talks Urged

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. E. L. Bartlett, D-Alaska, urged today that the United States join Canada in setting a 12-mile limit for coastal fishing waters.

He also recommended that the United States use the "straight baseline" methods for determining the three-mile limit on territorial waters. Under this system the line would run from a point rather than paralleling the coastline.

Canadian Prime Minister Lester Pearson has announced that Canada will set a 12-mile limit on fishing to protect that country's fisheries. Pearson said talks would be held with U.S. officials to determine the extent to which American fishing rights exist within such waters.

Bartlett told the Senate that the United States should use the talks with Canada as an "opportunity" time to extend U.S. fishing limits.
