

Most Roads In Forest Area Reported Open

LAKEVIEW—The weekly recreation report for the Fremont National Forest is as follows:

Highway District: Roads—All surfaced roads are passable. Some of the side roads in the higher country are still soft.

Trails—Trails to Blue Lake and through the Gearhart Wild Area are open.

Campgrounds—Sprague River, Linton Reservoir, Corral Creek campgrounds are open.

Fishing—Fishing fair to good in the Sprague, south fork of the Sprague, and in Linton Reservoir. No reports on Blue Lake.

Fire Danger—Fire danger medium but will increase rapidly with warmer weather.

Weather—Varied and changeable but generally cold.

Silver Lake Ranger District: Roads—All cindered roads graded and open. Unsurfaced roads mostly impassable as a result of continued rainfall. The last one-half mile of the East Bay Road to the East Side of Thompson Reservoir is rough and slick from last week's rain and snowfall.

Trails—None.

Campgrounds—Silver Creek Marsh and Thompson Reservoir campgrounds open to camping and picnicking.

Fishing—Fishing is generally poor at Thompson Reservoir. Some success on trolling reported. Very little stream fishing activity on the district.

Fire danger—Heavy showers and snowfall the latter part of the week has resulted in low fire danger.

Weather—Cold and stormy the past week. Clearing and warming trend starting Sunday.

Drews Valley, Thomas Creek and Warner Ranger District: Roads—Muddy in spots but most are open. Few side roads are still blocked by blowdown timber.

Fishing—Fair on Drews Valley District. Fishing good at Dairy Creek.

Fire danger—Increasing. Conditions are damp but drying trend is heavy.

Special items—Mosquitoes are down. Insect repellent is advised.

Weather Roundup

Northwest Weather	Pendleton	80	61
Western Oregon: Partly cloudy through Sunday with sunshine in the afternoon; highs 70-80 with 60-70 on the coast; lows 48-56.	Portland	74	56
Eastern Oregon: Partly sunny Sunday; scattered afternoon and evening mountain thundershowers; highs 72-82; lows 50-60.	Redmond	76	51
Tatoosh to Cape Blanco: Southwest winds 7-16 knots through Sunday.	Salem	78	52
	The Dalles	82	62
	Chicago	75	69
	Los Angeles	79	62
	New York	86	62
	Phoenix	105	70
	San Francisco	63	55
	Washington	65	65

Portland - Vancouver: Showers and clearing periods through Sunday; highs 68-74; lows 50-55.

Corvallis: Cloudy with some showers through Sunday; highs 75-80; lows 50-55.

Bend: Cloudy with showers through Sunday; highs 75-80; lows 45-50.

The Dalles - Hood River: Few showers tonight; partly cloudy Sunday; winds west 10-20 mph; highs 70-76; lows 50-55.

Baker - La Grande: Scattered showers Sunday; highs 72-78; lows 45-50.

Temperatures during the 24 hours ending at 4 a.m. PDT today:

	High	Low	Precip.
Baker	80	51
Brookings	68
Burns	78	52
Lakeview	72	54
Medford	80	59
North Bend	67	53

DENTAL PLATES

Repaired, etc.
Our convenient, handy, practical, and economical services NOW available.

PERSONAL DENTURE SERVICE

No appointment needed.
No delay - no waiting.
Easy Credit.
Examinations by request.
OPEN 9:00 - 5:00
1033 Main St., TU 4-3284

Newberries

Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday

PRICE BUSTERS

YARDAGE SALE

DRAPERY SQUARES

50% Fiberglass
Excellent for Making Your Own
Shorty Drapes, Cafes,
Throw Pillow Covers,
Chair Throws.

3 Yards For 1.00

Assorted prints and patterns. 2-10 yd. lengths

SPORTSWEAR MATERIAL

In Poplins, Denims & Chino

2 Yards For 1.00

White only - 36" widths, thick, thin

Terrycloth 2 yds. 1.00

CHARGE IT

CHARGE IT

CHARGE IT

CHARGE IT

CHARGE IT

CHARGE IT

MOUNTAIN ODDITY — Resembling a stack of hay in both color and formation, Haystack Mountain is still a geological puzzle. It is surrounded by a mass of dark lava stone devoid of minerals, yet the mountain's yellow rock contains various mineral deposits as well as gold. The costs of mining have prevented hopeful prospectors from striking it rich, so its wealth is still intact.

Haystack Mountain Unusual

By J. O. McKINNEY

MOUNT SHASTA — Haystack Mountain, some seven miles out of Wend on U.S. Highway 97 to Klamath Falls, is a geological and architectural oddity. As its name implies, its build is that of a stack of hay.

Its color, too, is similar to a pile of well-cured grass. The surrounding terrain is lava stone, piled irregularly, and darker in shade.

Neither does dissimilarity stop there. Lava is notoriously free from minerals, as early day miners soon learned, but the yellow stone formation of Haystack Mountain is rich in mineral deposits — particularly in gold.

The entrance to a tunnel found on the hill's north slope leads to a gold deposit that has several times been mined. Spiraling costs of mining, with a governmental peg on the selling price of gold, has prevented anyone from developing the plant into a paying proposition.

The mountain having so little in common with its neighbors has been owned by several persons who have tried to mine it, to develop it for range lands, and by at least one owner who attempted to use it as a field for replanting exotic game.

Roland Menary, timber contractor, racehorse man, and soldier of fortune who once lived in Mount Shasta, tried to introduce bighorn sheep on Haystack Mountain and nearby Sheep Rock. The Moulton sheep from Corsica never did respond to Haystack Mountain, but they did move near Dinnell Lake, where remnants of the original herd still are found.

Finding this unique mountain, so different from its surroundings, is not difficult. Highway 97 runs nearly 300 degrees of a complete circle around it, not more than six or seven miles north of Wend. Its outline is that of a haystack, and its distance is only a scant mile from the road nearly all the way around. How it came to be so surrounded with lava is puzzling to geologists. It is just an island of land that was missed when all the rest was a mass of flowing lava.

The playgirl testified against Gordon at his trial. Extracts from the tape recordings allegedly made by her have been sent to British Atty. Gen. Sir John Johnson, it was learned.

Gordon's lawyer, Ellis Lincoln, has said he will appeal the singer's conviction.

"If this tape is produced to me, and I presume it will be, it could prove to be a statement of the highest importance to my client," he said.

In another development Marilyn (Mandy) Rice-Davies, Miss Keeler's former roommate, returned to London from Majorca. She had testified at the pre-trial hearing of Dr. Stephen Ward, who introduced Miss Keeler to Profumo, that she had slept with Lord Astor. Ward is accused of living off prostitution earnings of Christine Mandy and other girls.

"I have disgusted the boys really love," Miss Rice-Davies told newsmen. "I am leaving Majorca in a week and never return."

The 18-year-old blonde burst into tears. "I am not really a bad girl," she said. "From the bottom of my heart, I am ashamed."

Bend Hotel Sale Fought

PORTLAND (UPI)—The acting U.S. Attorney Friday petitioned for removal of court action on efforts to auction the Pilot Butte Inn in Bend from the Deschutes County Circuit Court to the U.S. District Court.

The action by acting U.S. Atty. Sidney Lesak would remove the case from Deschutes County where a restraining order has been issued against the U.S. Marshal and sale of the inn has been set for Thursday, July 11, in the Deschutes County Courthouse.

A hearing is set for the previous day, July 10, by Federal Judge William East to determine if the sale should go on as scheduled.

Sale of the large hotel in downtown Bend by the U.S. Marshal became bogged down for the third time a week ago when a restraining order was served by Sheriff Forrest C. Sholes.

The action was termed a "conspiracy by a bunch of members of the local bar" by California attorney Edward Bloom who represents the plaintiff, Martin T. Byrne, in a civil suit against Jack D. Carbett and others, alleged owners of the property.

Byrne was trying to sell the half-century old inn to satisfy a California judgment in which Byrne was awarded recovery of $139,212 involving stock transactions.

The suit charges the defendants with forming a number of corporations in order to evade federal taxes. Byrne and Clark Barrett are trustees in bankruptcy for Frank William Corbett.

Development of more park and camping facilities in the Klamath Falls area—a chamber project of long-standing—takes an official step forward next Saturday afternoon, July 13, with the formal dedication of Klamath County's Hagelstein Park, located nine miles north of the city on U.S. 97.

The new county park, with easy access to the lake, has boat launching facilities, 10 trailer stalls, rest rooms and a picnic area.

Southern Californians have long envied Klamath County for its abundance of water, the uncluttered lakes, streams and highways, the clear air and the availability of land. This week an Angeleno who was in the chamber office expressed his envy of our blue sky. "Tell me about this sky out here," he said. "Are you sure it hasn't been painted? It has been so long since I have seen a beautiful blue sky like that, I just can't believe that it's real!"

A second major project of PNTA, in which the chamber also participates, is the annual summer visit of prominent travel editors to the Northwest. Of the four editors to visit Oregon this year, three came from the San Francisco Bay Area, the fourth from Victoria, British Columbia.

With staff members of the Travel Information Division of the State Highway Department as their tour hosts, the travel editors will be in Klamath County on July 25. Tentative plans call for visits to Crater Lake National Park, Fort Klamath and Collier State Park and Logging Museum.

Development of more park and camping facilities in the Klamath Falls area—a chamber project of long-standing—takes an official step forward next Saturday afternoon, July 13, with the formal dedication of Klamath County's Hagelstein Park, located nine miles north of the city on U.S. 97.

The new county park, with easy access to the lake, has boat launching facilities, 10 trailer stalls, rest rooms and a picnic area.

Southern Californians have long envied Klamath County for its abundance of water, the uncluttered lakes, streams and highways, the clear air and the availability of land. This week an Angeleno who was in the chamber office expressed his envy of our blue sky. "Tell me about this sky out here," he said. "Are you sure it hasn't been painted? It has been so long since I have seen a beautiful blue sky like that, I just can't believe that it's real!"

A second major project of PNTA, in which the chamber

also participates, is the annual summer visit of prominent travel editors to the Northwest. Of the four editors to visit Oregon this year, three came from the San Francisco Bay Area, the fourth from Victoria, British Columbia.

With staff members of the Travel Information Division of the State Highway Department as their tour hosts, the travel editors will be in Klamath County on July 25. Tentative plans call for visits to Crater Lake National Park, Fort Klamath and Collier State Park and Logging Museum.

Development of more park and camping facilities in the Klamath Falls area—a chamber project of long-standing—takes an official step forward next Saturday afternoon, July 13, with the formal dedication of Klamath County's Hagelstein Park, located nine miles north of the city on U.S. 97.

The new county park, with easy access to the lake, has boat launching facilities, 10 trailer stalls, rest rooms and a picnic area.

Southern Californians have long envied Klamath County for its abundance of water, the uncluttered lakes, streams and highways, the clear air and the availability of land. This week an Angeleno who was in the chamber office expressed his envy of our blue sky. "Tell me about this sky out here," he said. "Are you sure it hasn't been painted? It has been so long since I have seen a beautiful blue sky like that, I just can't believe that it's real!"

A second major project of PNTA, in which the chamber

also participates, is the annual summer visit of prominent travel editors to the Northwest. Of the four editors to visit Oregon this year, three came from the San Francisco Bay Area, the fourth from Victoria, British Columbia.

With staff members of the Travel Information Division of the State Highway Department as their tour hosts, the travel editors will be in Klamath County on July 25. Tentative plans call for visits to Crater Lake National Park, Fort Klamath and Collier State Park and Logging Museum.

Development of more park and camping facilities in the Klamath Falls area—a chamber project of long-standing—takes an official step forward next Saturday afternoon, July 13, with the formal dedication of Klamath County's Hagelstein Park, located nine miles north of the city on U.S. 97.

The new county park, with easy access to the lake, has boat launching facilities, 10 trailer stalls, rest rooms and a picnic area.

Southern Californians have long envied Klamath County for its abundance of water, the uncluttered lakes, streams and highways, the clear air and the availability of land. This week an Angeleno who was in the chamber office expressed his envy of our blue sky. "Tell me about this sky out here," he said. "Are you sure it hasn't been painted? It has been so long since I have seen a beautiful blue sky like that, I just can't believe that it's real!"

A second major project of PNTA, in which the chamber

also participates, is the annual summer visit of prominent travel editors to the Northwest. Of the four editors to visit Oregon this year, three came from the San Francisco Bay Area, the fourth from Victoria, British Columbia.

With staff members of the Travel Information Division of the State Highway Department as their tour hosts, the travel editors will be in Klamath County on July 25. Tentative plans call for visits to Crater Lake National Park, Fort Klamath and Collier State Park and Logging Museum.

Development of more park and camping facilities in the Klamath Falls area—a chamber project of long-standing—takes an official step forward next Saturday afternoon, July 13, with the formal dedication of Klamath County's Hagelstein Park, located nine miles north of the city on U.S. 97.

The new county park, with easy access to the lake, has boat launching facilities, 10 trailer stalls, rest rooms and a picnic area.

Southern Californians have long envied Klamath County for its abundance of water, the uncluttered lakes, streams and highways, the clear air and the availability of land. This week an Angeleno who was in the chamber office expressed his envy of our blue sky. "Tell me about this sky out here," he said. "Are you sure it hasn't been painted? It has been so long since I have seen a beautiful blue sky like that, I just can't believe that it's real!"

A second major project of PNTA, in which the chamber

also participates, is the annual summer visit of prominent travel editors to the Northwest. Of the four editors to visit Oregon this year, three came from the San Francisco Bay Area, the fourth from Victoria, British Columbia.

With staff members of the Travel Information Division of the State Highway Department as their tour hosts, the travel editors will be in Klamath County on July 25. Tentative plans call for visits to Crater Lake National Park, Fort Klamath and Collier State Park and Logging Museum.

Development of more park and camping facilities in the Klamath Falls area—a chamber project of long-standing—takes an official step forward next Saturday afternoon, July 13, with the formal dedication of Klamath County's Hagelstein Park, located nine miles north of the city on U.S. 97.

The new county park, with easy access to the lake, has boat launching facilities, 10 trailer stalls, rest rooms and a picnic area.

Southern Californians have long envied Klamath County for its abundance of water, the uncluttered lakes, streams and highways, the clear air and the availability of land. This week an Angeleno who was in the chamber office expressed his envy of our blue sky. "Tell me about this sky out here," he said. "Are you sure it hasn't been painted? It has been so long since I have seen a beautiful blue sky like that, I just can't believe that it's real!"

A second major project of PNTA, in which the chamber

also participates, is the annual summer visit of prominent travel editors to the Northwest. Of the four editors to visit Oregon this year, three came from the San Francisco Bay Area, the fourth from Victoria, British Columbia.

With staff members of the Travel Information Division of the State Highway Department as their tour hosts, the travel editors will be in Klamath County on July 25. Tentative plans call for visits to Crater Lake National Park, Fort Klamath and Collier State Park and Logging Museum.

Police Seek New Profumo Evidence

LONDON (UPI)—British police are looking into new aspects of the activities of Christine Keeler, the call girl who played a key role in the Profumo scandal, it was reported today.

Informal sources said police Friday questioned Miss Keeler's former business manager, Robert Drury, in connection with 12 hours of tape recordings he claimed were made by her about her relations with a Jamaican jazz singer. The sources said the tapes were in a bank vault.

The singer, Aloysius (Lucky) Gordon, one of Christine's former boy friends, has been sentenced to three years in jail for shooting at her through an apartment door.

The incident occurred before Miss Keeler's name was linked publicly to resigned War Minister John Profumo. It was in the midst of the uproar about Profumo that the 21-year-old redhead fired Drury.

Drury, a 29-year-old Canadian, is suing Miss Keeler for a third of the fee she collected for selling her story to British newspapers.

The playgirl testified against Gordon at his trial. Extracts from the tape recordings allegedly made by her have been sent to British Atty. Gen. Sir John Johnson, it was learned.

Gordon's lawyer, Ellis Lincoln, has said he will appeal the singer's conviction.

"If this tape is produced to me, and I presume it will be, it could prove to be a statement of the highest importance to my client," he said.

In another development Marilyn (Mandy) Rice-Davies, Miss Keeler's former roommate, returned to London from Majorca. She had testified at the pre-trial hearing of Dr. Stephen Ward, who introduced Miss Keeler to Profumo, that she had slept with Lord Astor. Ward is accused of living off prostitution earnings of Christine Mandy and other girls.

"I have disgusted the boys really love," Miss Rice-Davies told newsmen. "I am leaving Majorca in a week and never return."

The 18-year-old blonde burst into tears. "I am not really a bad girl," she said. "From the bottom of my heart, I am ashamed."

A hearing is set for the previous day, July 10, by Federal Judge William East to determine if the sale should go on as scheduled.

Sale of the large hotel in downtown Bend by the U.S. Marshal became bogged down for the third time a week ago when a restraining order was served by Sheriff Forrest C. Sholes.

The action was termed a "conspiracy by a bunch of members of the local bar" by California attorney Edward Bloom who represents the plaintiff, Martin T. Byrne, in a civil suit against Jack D. Carbett and others, alleged owners of the property.

Byrne was trying to sell the half-century old inn to satisfy a California judgment in which Byrne was awarded recovery of $139,212 involving stock transactions.

The suit charges the defendants with forming a number of corporations in order to evade federal taxes. Byrne and Clark Barrett are trustees in bankruptcy for Frank William Corbett.

Development of more park and camping facilities in the Klamath Falls area—a chamber project of long-standing—takes an official step forward next Saturday afternoon, July 13, with the formal dedication of Klamath County's Hagelstein Park, located nine miles north of the city on U.S. 97.

The new county park, with easy access to the lake, has boat launching facilities, 10 trailer stalls, rest rooms and a picnic area.

Southern Californians have long envied Klamath County for its abundance of water, the uncluttered lakes, streams and highways, the clear air and the availability of land. This week an Angeleno who was in the chamber office expressed his envy of our blue sky. "Tell me about this sky out here," he said. "Are you sure it hasn't been painted? It has been so long since I have seen a beautiful blue sky like that, I just can't believe that it's real!"

A second major project of PNTA, in which the chamber

also participates, is the annual summer visit of prominent travel editors to the Northwest. Of the four editors to visit Oregon this year, three came from the San Francisco Bay Area, the fourth from Victoria, British Columbia.

With staff members of the Travel Information Division of the State Highway Department as their tour hosts, the travel editors will be in Klamath County on July 25. Tentative plans call for visits to Crater Lake National Park, Fort Klamath and Collier State Park and Logging Museum.

Development of more park and camping facilities in the Klamath Falls area—a chamber project of long-standing—takes an official step forward next Saturday afternoon, July 13, with the formal dedication of Klamath County's Hagelstein Park, located nine miles north of the city on U.S. 97.

The new county park, with easy access to the lake, has boat launching facilities, 10 trailer stalls, rest rooms and a picnic area.

Southern Californians have long envied Klamath County for its abundance of water, the uncluttered lakes, streams and highways, the clear air and the availability of land. This week an Angeleno who was in the chamber office expressed his envy of our blue sky. "Tell me about this sky out here," he said. "Are you sure it hasn't been painted? It has been so long since I have seen a beautiful blue sky like that, I just can't believe that it's real!"

A second major project of PNTA, in which the chamber

also participates, is the annual summer visit of prominent travel editors to the Northwest. Of the four editors to visit Oregon this year, three came from the San Francisco Bay Area, the fourth from Victoria, British Columbia.

With staff members of the Travel Information Division of the State Highway Department as their tour hosts, the travel editors will be in Klamath County on July 25. Tentative plans call for visits to Crater Lake National Park, Fort Klamath and Collier State Park and Logging Museum.

Development of more park and camping facilities in the Klamath Falls area—a chamber project of long-standing—takes an official step forward next Saturday afternoon, July 13, with the formal dedication of Klamath County's Hagelstein Park, located nine miles north of the city on U.S. 97.

The new county park, with easy access to the lake, has boat launching facilities, 10 trailer stalls, rest rooms and a picnic area.

Southern Californians have long envied Klamath County for its abundance of water, the uncluttered lakes, streams and highways, the clear air and the availability of land. This week an Angeleno who was in the chamber office expressed his envy of our blue sky. "Tell me about this sky out here," he said. "Are you sure it hasn't been painted? It has been so long since I have seen a beautiful blue sky like that, I just can't believe that it's real!"

A second major project of PNTA, in which the chamber

also participates, is the annual summer visit of prominent travel editors to the Northwest. Of the four editors to visit Oregon this year, three came from the San Francisco Bay Area, the fourth from Victoria, British Columbia.

With staff members of the Travel Information Division of the State Highway Department as their tour hosts, the travel editors will be in Klamath County on July 25. Tentative plans call for visits to Crater Lake National Park, Fort Klamath and Collier State Park and Logging Museum.

Development of more park and camping facilities in the Klamath Falls area—a chamber project of long-standing—takes an official step forward next Saturday afternoon, July 13, with the formal dedication of Klamath County's Hagelstein Park, located nine miles north of the city on U.S. 97.

The new county park, with easy access to the lake, has boat launching facilities, 10 trailer stalls, rest rooms and a picnic area.

Southern Californians have long envied Klamath County for its abundance of water, the uncluttered lakes, streams and highways, the clear air and the availability of land. This week an Angeleno who was in the chamber office expressed his envy of our blue sky. "Tell me about this sky out here," he said. "Are you sure it hasn't been painted? It has been so long since I have seen a beautiful blue sky like that, I just can't believe that it's real!"

A second major project of PNTA, in which the chamber

also participates, is the annual summer visit of prominent travel editors to the Northwest. Of the four editors to visit Oregon this year, three came from the San Francisco Bay Area, the fourth from Victoria, British Columbia.

With staff members of the Travel Information Division of the State Highway Department as their tour hosts, the travel editors will be in Klamath County on July 25. Tentative plans call for visits to Crater Lake National Park, Fort Klamath and Collier State Park and Logging Museum.

Development of more park and camping facilities in the Klamath Falls area—a chamber project of long-standing—takes an official step forward next Saturday afternoon, July 13, with the formal dedication of Klamath County's Hagelstein Park, located nine miles north of the city on U.S. 97.

The new county park, with easy access to the lake, has boat launching facilities, 10 trailer stalls, rest rooms and a picnic area.

Southern Californians have long envied Klamath County for its abundance of water, the uncluttered lakes, streams and highways, the clear air and the availability of land. This week an Angeleno who was in the chamber office expressed his envy of our blue sky. "Tell me about this sky out here," he said. "Are you sure it hasn't been painted? It has been so long since I have seen a beautiful blue sky like that, I just can't believe that it's real!"

A second major project of PNTA, in which the chamber

also participates, is the annual summer visit of prominent travel editors to the Northwest. Of the four editors to visit Oregon this year, three came from the San Francisco Bay Area, the fourth from Victoria, British Columbia.

With staff members of the Travel Information Division of the State Highway Department as their tour hosts, the