New Invention Creates Patent Office Problem

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI)—According to a magazine article published this week, the United States is experiencing an invention explosion of even greater magnitude than the population explosion.

Our old Yankee ingenuity is sparking new ideas so fast that the U.S. Patent Office can't keep up with them. At last count, it was almost 200,000 applications behind.

To realize how really big the backlog is, one must consider a statement made by Patent Commissioner David L. Ladd in an interview with U.S. News & World Report.

Ladd said the problem could not be solved by hiring more employees.

I never thought I'd live to see the day when a bureaucrat would make a statement like that.

Picks Up List

It shook me up so much that I stopped by the Patent Office and picked up a copy of its weekly list of new inventions. I could immediately understand why Ladd was feeling desperate.

During that one week alone, his office issued more than 900 patents, the scope and variety of which would make your head spin except for a few inventions that apparently were designed to make your head spin spinning.

Here are just a few of the devices that were awarded patents in that period:

A disposable paint brush; a machine for skinning fish; an apparatus for measuring the length of trousers; a retractable awning that you can run out over your auto's windshield when it starts to rain.

A self-cleaning ash tray; a hair brush that is grounded so that it removes static electricity from hair; a serving spoon that you can eat when you have finished serving.

New Mousetrap

There was even a new, though not necessarily better, mousetrap. If my understanding of the way it works is correct, it lures a mouse into a container where he eats so much cheese he becomes too fat to get back out again.

I assume the mouse stays there until the fatty diet and lack of exercise raises his cholesterol content to the point where he suffers a fatal heart attack.

To my mind, however, nothing points up the complexity of modern life quite so much as a new type of brasserie invented by a lady of Bridgeport, Conn.

This device is described as having seven segments, one being "a pair of shoulder straps, each connected at its forward end to said upwardly directed apex of a respective transition member and connected at its rearward end to the upper edge of said band at a point adapted to be disposed at the back of the wearer."

All of that just so some doll can look good in a sweater. No wonder the patent office is swamped.

China Bomb Delayed

LONDON (UPI)—Red China's race to explode its first atomic bomb was reported Tuesday by the withdrawal from China of Soviet experts and scientists.

Diplomatic reports here said the Russians apparently took with them important "ingredients" when they returned to the Soviet Union.

As a result, they said, the Peking regime has run into considerable technical nuclear difficulties. The first blast had been predicted for some time this year but now may have to be put off for some time to come.

The nuclear issue and Peking's failure to get Moscow's assistance is understood to have played an important role in the deterioration of Sino-Soviet relations.

Britain's opposition Labor party leader, Harold Wilson, reported here recently after a meeting with Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev that the Russian leader had said he could get a settlement with Peking if he gave the Chinese nuclear weapons.

The Russians, in the wake of the heightening ideological conflict with Peking, withdrew their experts from China some time ago. With them went a number of scientists and physicists who have been advising the Chinese on nuclear problems.

Apparently the Russians have never been in a hurry to give the Chinese military nuclear know-how, presumably for political reasons, even at a time when relations between them were still good.
