

Air Age Parson Is Contrast To Old Time Ministers Who Made Circuit To Parishes By Horse, Buggy Or Mule

ELY, Nevada (UPI) — An air Nevada mountains. A decided contrast to the old time minister who made his mountain circuit by horse and buggy or mule, the Rev. Donald Broeske is a familiar sight on United Air Lines Flight 340. The reverend is enthusiastic about his flights. "My heavens," he likes to tell people, "do you realize I actually delivered his second sermon at the communities of Elko and Ely, Nev., which are separated by a series of small mountain ranges. Each Sunday he gives a sermon at Elko, then boards the airliner and flies 190 miles to Ely to arrive in Elko before I left Ely?" He has a point, because Ely is on Mountain time and Elko on Pacific time. Rev. Broeske was sent to Nevada from Fresno, Calif., in 1939 by the Lutheran Church. A missionary, he and his family live most of the time in Ely, a mining town of 5,000 inhabitants. He flies to Elko, which likes to be in the West," toward the end of the week, remaining in the gambling-ranching town of 6,000 persons until Sunday morning when he gives an early morning service. Then he boards the 9:25 a.m. flight to Ely, arriving slightly less than an hour later, and hurries to preach his second-sermon of the day.
