Mountain Folk Burn Camp

ROSSMAN, N.C. (UPI) — Mountain folk stewed for days about the strange camp where, it was said, people wore no clothes, worshipped no god and never got a haircut.

The teen-aged campers "have long hair and sexy clothes and sometimes they wear no clothes at all," one mountaineer grumbled.

Some said free love was being taught at the camp, and others reported seeing youngsters swimming naked in a lake.

Last week the mountaineers got so disgruntled they sent a council of six citizens out to the camp and got assurances that the campers would stay away from Rossman.

But then some of the campers came into town, and word got around that there were Negroes at the camp, called Summerlane. This, officials said today, was the last straw for the local folk. About 400 mountaineers went into the camp, burned down the gymnasium, threw gasoline on the lake which was reported used for nude bathing and set it afire, and rioted for nearly five hours.

No Arrests
The fracas started Thursday night and ended about 3 a.m. Friday. Gunfire shattered the window of a bus, abandoned by the campers. One man was stabbed but was not seriously injured. There were no arrests.

In New York, a spokesman for the campers, Skip Weatherford, said that when the townsfolk stormed the camp "the Rev. George Van Hilsheimer and 15 other male and female counselors had, protected and calmed the children."

The children ranged in age from infants to 16-year-olds.

One of the counselors, Bruce Grund of New York, said "I

Man Treated After Crash
A Klamath Falls man was treated for cuts at the Klamath Valley Hospital Wednesday after the car he was driving was involved in a two-car crash at 4:30 p.m. in front of the Klamath View Motel on U.S. 97.

State Police said Everett McKay, 3683 Flint Street, came around a curve and slammed into a Pacific Power and Light Company utility truck that was stopped on the highway preparing to turn onto Mallard Lane.

The truck was driven by Paul Pittenger, 1440 Summers Lane. McKay's car received extensive damage in the crash while the truck was not damaged.

can't understand why the people are so incensed. We have done nothing to provoke the townspeople."

Campers Get Out

But the campers didn't stay to argue. They piled into cars Friday and said they were going to an integrated camp in Wanaque, N.J., called Midvale. Officials said their cars bore license tags from as far away as Mexico and Oregon. The group was expected to arrive in Midvale Sunday night.

Weatherford, 30, who works for a private agency called mobilization for youth, which helps train and employ high school drop-outs, scoffed at allegations of immorality at the camp.

"It's just ridiculous," he said. "I don't even know what to say about charges like that."

Local officials and citizens described the youngsters as "beatniks," shabbily dressed and in need of haircuts.

HOT COALS TO BENSON

BENSON, Ariz. — Firemen in this southern Arizona town drove their trucks to the railroad station, then calmly waited for the fire to come to them. Pretty soon, it did. A west-bound freight train had reported a fire in one of its boxcars. The Benson firemen extinguished the fire.

Crater Lake Official Departs

Neal G. Guse, assistant superintendent at Crater Lake National Park for two years, is departing July 14 to assume the superintendency of Haleakala National Park. Superintendent W. Ward Yeager reported recently. He will report for duty on July 18 and will live in the park near Kahului, Maui, Hawaii.

Starting his work with the National Park Service at Wind Cave National Park, S.D., as a Civilian Conservation Corps clerk in 1936, Guse subsequently served at Badlands National Monument, Mount Rushmore National Memorial, Grand Teton National Park and the Western Regional Office in San Francisco. In addition to his 25 years with the service, he spent two years in the Navy during World War II.

Guse has been active in Rotary in Klamath Falls. Accompanying him to Hawaii will be his wife, Mary. They have three children, Neal Jr., married, who is park biologist at Rocky Mountain National Park; Alyse, married, of Jackson, Wyo.; and John, a high school senior in Estes Park, Colo.

Timber Sale Billion Feet

Sales of national forest timber felled by the Columbus Day storm now exceed one billion board feet, according to J. Herbert Stone, regional forester, U.S. Forest Service.

In the national forests of Oregon and Washington, 938 sales have been made with a total volume of 1,345,469,000 board feet, of which approximately 25 per cent was intermingled green timber that had to be logged with the blowdown timber.

Most recent estimates on a regional basis indicates there is approximately 390 million feet yet to sell, much of which is advertised at this time. In the past three months, 425 sales were made involving 861,322,000 board feet.

Total volume of blowdown timber actually harvested to June 30 is estimated at 403,332,000 board feet. The current woods industry strike has slowed removal of damaged timber in certain areas, Stone said.

Merrill Planning Welcome

MERRILL—The Merrill Lions Club discussed the governor's "Welcome To Oregon" program at its last meeting. It was agreed that Merrill, as the first Oregon town through which tourists travel from the south on Highway 99, will erect a banner across the highway welcoming visitors to the state. Stickers and posters are to be purchased and placed in service stations, restaurants and also be erected.
