

Welfare Agency Attacks Eligibility

SALEM (UPI)—A concentrated program to get people off the welfare rolls is being planned for the coming two years, Public Welfare Administrator Andrew F. Juras said.

Welfare programs in Oregon during the 1963-65 biennium will cost $106.8 million. Of this total, $41.9 million will come from the state's general fund, $13.4 million will be paid by counties, and the federal government will make up the balance.

"Better services to help people toward self-support, and a closer watch on eligibility will be among top objectives for the coming biennium," Juras said.

The legislature provided funds so the agency could hire an additional 124 case workers. Juras believes this can result in long-range savings as more recipients are guided into self-supporting activities.

The agency hopes to implement its case classification program statewide by 1965. Under "case classification," recipients who will respond to intensive assistance are separated from those who cannot benefit from such attention.

As many as 200 of the non-responsive cases will be assigned a single case worker, but only about 35 cases are assigned workers who deal with those who seem to be likely rehabilitation prospects.

A pilot program in Multnomah and Jackson counties indicated the system paid off.

Plans are being made for a training program to enable able-bodied but unskilled welfare recipients to prepare for employment.

This program was authorized by the 1963 legislature, Juras said.

Also planned is a demonstration project aimed at quicker rehabilitation of disabled persons through teamwork between welfare and vocational rehabilitation.

Improvements in eligibility determination also are planned. "If only those who are eligible receive aid, we can do a better job with them," Juras commented.

A new federal directive will require continuing reviews of eligibility in all programs by next January. This order resulted from the nationwide check of Aid to Dependent Children cases completed in May.

Also given major emphasis in welfare planning for the biennium, Juras said, were improved health services including expanded payments for medical care, support for recipients from responsible relatives, improved business operations and work simplification, administrative improvements on the county level in both business and social service areas, and staff training.

Rod, Gun Club Meets Tonight

The regular monthly meeting of the Kingsley Field Rod and Gun Club will be held tonight, Thursday, in the base Service Club instead of the clubhouse as previously announced.

The speaker is Fred Huntington, president of ROBS Reloading Equipment Company, who will address the group and show two color films. One film depicts elk hunting in Idaho, and the other is of an African safari.

Members are urged to bring their quarterly dues.

Safe Play Often Best

By OSWALD JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

It is remarkable how often an expert will find a safety play to make a contract that other players would lose.

North bid too much and the final contract was nothing to brag about, but Eddie Rosen of Chicago, who played the hand, managed to bring it home.

He could not have made it against a heart lead, but West opened the ace of trumps and shifted to the queen of clubs and from then on Eddie was in complete control of everything.

He took his ace of clubs, led a heart to dummy's king, discarded his last heart on dummy's king of clubs, ruffed a low heart, entered dummy with the ten of trumps, ruffed another low heart, cashed his last two trumps in order to draw the rest of East's trumps and also to get rid of dummy's last low club and seven of diamonds.

Then he led a diamond to the ace and announced, "The board is good."

The whole play is worthy of study. Most players would have simply drawn trumps and played for a 3-2 heart break, but Eddie guarded against the 4-1 split.

What do you do now?

A—Bid six hearts to show two kings. Your partner can assume that you have solid spades so it is up to him to bid seven if he thinks you can make it.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Instead of bidding five no-trump after four five diamonds, your partner has jumped to six no-trump. What do you do now?
