With fall not too far in the future the Airmen's Wives Club of Kingsley Field is stepping up plans for the coming year. Under the direction of Service Club Director Judy Taylor, projects are designed to be both practical and fun to the many wives living in the city.

The club is presently conducting a membership drive with a goal of 100 wives of airmen of the first three grades. Two meetings a month are held in the Service Club at Kingsley Field. The first Tuesday is a business meeting and welcome tea for new members and the third Tuesday, an evening social meeting with special programs. Free nursery care is available by reservation and mothers with children under six months are invited to bring them to the club for care during the meetings.

The welcome committee urges names of newcomers to be called to Jean Bosma, TU 2-6846, or Ann Brown, TU 2-0667.

Airmen's wives have a recipe exchange program with special cooking advice given when needed. At right, Mary Ann Wilson reads recipe for Hachee which is made by Dirkje (Jennie) Epperson, whose home is in Amsterdam.

September brings a cake decorating course taught by Mrs. Pat Rennels. Mrs. Rennels is shown above demonstrating her art for Ann Dupree. Those interested in this course may register by calling the Service Club, TU 2-4411, Ext. 227.

At left, Ann Brown and Judy Taylor, service club director, admire quilt which will be finished at fireside quilting parties beginning in October. Cloth scraps are needed for this endeavor and may be brought to the service club.

A recent meeting presented a hair styling course and much interest has been created in simple home care of hair to meet budget demands. Below, Jean Bare dresses hair of Dolores Dye. Little Cynthia Dye shows early interest in good grooming.

Another important plan of the wives club is to meet needs of young mothers during hospitalization by caring for young children left in the homes. At left, Ann Brown gets pointers from Kathy Davidek who tends her two-month-old daughter Deborah.

Other program plans for the fall season are home color scheming and simple home decorating. A "Holiday Homes" course in November features festive ideas for the table, home and door decorations for Thanksgiving and Christmas.
