

Chamber Okays Nomination Slate For Election Of Five Directors

The 10 candidates selected by a six-man nominating committee to compete for five posts on the chamber of commerce's board of directors were approved by the chamber during its regular meeting yesterday at the Pelican Cafe.

Voting for the posts with terms of three years each are Fred Ehlers, Harry Glesin, Dick Green, Ted Hyde, Henry Kerr, Rod Murray, Charlie Ramp, Truman Runyan, Paul Surprenant and Doran Turner.

The nominees were named by a committee which included Sam Ritchey (chairman), Vern Owens, Fred Ehlers, Robert Kent, Russ Tisdale and Frank Ganong.

Ballots will be mailed Wednesday, Aug. 21, to all chamber members in good standing and are to be completed and returned to the chamber office before 10 a.m. election day, Wednesday, Sept. 4.

The five candidates receiving the most votes will serve on the board beginning at the start of the chamber's 1963-64 fiscal year, Oct. 1. Retiring from the board on that date will be James Boechel, Noel Flynn, John Moehl, James Stillwell and Adolph Zamsky Jr.

The terms of five directors on the 15-member board expire each year.

In other business, Noel Flynn, director of the National Affairs Committee, invited members of the chamber and the public to attend a debate between Wayne Blair and Dr. Glenn Miller on the subject of the U.S.-Soviet nuclear test ban treaty, 7 a.m., Tuesday, at the Winema Motor Hotel.

Blair will discuss the favorable points of the treaty while Dr. Miller is to debate the opposing view. People desiring to attend the session which will include breakfast are requested to make reservations at the chamber of commerce.

A debate on the civil rights issue is being considered for some later date, Ross Ragland, committee chairman, said following the meeting.

On the subject of two forthcoming conventions, George Callison, chamber manager, announced that the Okanogan Cariboo Trail Association would meet here Saturday, Oct. 5, before going on to Reno for its annual two-day meeting, Oct. 6-7. Callison remarked that he would attend an executive committee meeting of the group to be held this weekend in the same city.

The association has been promoting the designation of Highway 97 as the official Pan American Highway linking Alaska with South America.

The other annual convention is to be held by the Pacific Northwest Travel Association at Kelowna, B.C., Sept. 5 through 7. Callison urged chamber members to attend the session, if possible, because plans for the national travel shows in which Klamath County is represented would be completed.

Earlier, Callison stated that the Portland and national offices of the Better Business Bureau had alerted the chamber to a Southern California mail order firm which was advertising the sale of popular brand coffee and laundry soap for approximately $3 per case, along with other items at higher prices.

The bureau stated that the company would ship all of the items ordered by a customer except the coffee and soap, which would be marked "out of stock" on the shipment memo.

A blending appliance advertised for sale at $19 was appraised by the bureau as being of inferior quality. The name and address of the manufacturer was not on the machine or in the literature which accompanied it. The one-year warranty on the appliance is therefore of doubtful value, it was pointed out.

Jim Monteith, president of the chamber, announced that next week's program would feature a film entitled, "Financing a Small Business."

A guest at yesterday's meeting was Bob Cushman, who accompanied Jim Patterson.

THE WAYWARD WIND — The J. W. Kerns Company, 734 South Sixth Street, was awaiting "business as usual" Wednesday when along came a wind that blew out $200 worth of plate glass window. "For no apparent reason," said Jim Kerns, standing in the spot where the window once was, looked puzzled. He said he heard the twister-like wind come rattling over the top of his business then saw it sweep down on South Sixth taking his window with it.

Righters Picket Home Of Mayor; Plan New Moves In Chicago Strife

By United Press International

White and Negro civil rights demonstrators Wednesday picketed the home of Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, and integration leaders planned a meeting today to map their next move in the city's turbulent racial scene.

Other demonstrations marked the nation's racial picture in the South, the Middle West and the East Wednesday, but there was a lull in the violence that erupted earlier in the week.

Five pickets marched in front of the home of Daley, last of the nation's big city political bosses. They also picketed the home of Clair M. Roddewig, president of the city board of education.

The protest centered on the use of mobile trailer-like school classrooms which the demonstrators contend perpetuate alleged de facto segregation in the city's schools.

Other integration developments: Elizabeth, N.J.: 250 pickets returned to the sites of two construction projects which were plagued with violence earlier in the week. Equipment - carrying trucks moved in and out freely in contrast to the brawling between police and demonstrators Tuesday.

Goldboro, N.C.: More than 500 Negroes staged the fifth consecutive night of anti-segregation marches Wednesday night. Police said several rocks were hurled at the crowd as they sang and prayed on the courthouse steps. No one was injured. More than 1,000 whites watched the demonstration.

Sparta, Tenn.: White County High School was scheduled to desegregate its classrooms today. The school superintendent said "five or six" of the 36 Negroes registered are on the school football team.

East St. Louis: Integrationists held a knee-in at two banks which they accused of discriminatory hiring practices.

Peoria, Ill.: Forty-seven demonstrators conducted a lie-down at a parking lot entrance of the Peoria Water Works. They protested alleged racial discrimination in job hiring.

Columbus, Ga.: A Negro policeman was scheduled to begin work today on the city police force, the first of his race on the force in five years. Three others are due to begin work soon.

Macon, Ga.: Attorneys for 44 Negro children went to federal court to force Bibb (Macon) County to integrate its public schools. The county board has refused to voluntarily end public school segregation.

Yacht Jaunt With Borge Proves Trip With Quips

By DICK WEST

United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In addition to being a comedian, pianist and poultry farmer, Victor Borge has in recent years become a yachtsman.

He has his 68-foot sailing vessel at anchor here this week while playing an engagement at the Carter Barron Amphitheater. And the other afternoon he took a group of us reporters on a cruise down the Potomac.

A stiff wind was blowing across the river as we pulled away from the dock. Borge obviously was impressed by the towering grey-caps. (The Potomac is too dirty to have whitecaps.)

"My!" he exclaimed. "Look at the angry sewerage!"

"How big is your yacht, Mr. Borge?" someone asked.

"It's two-masted," Borge replied. "Or three, if you count my son."

"What is the top speed?" another reporter inquired.

"The speed is the same on top as it is on the bottom," Borge said.

A luncheon, featuring dishes imported from his native Denmark, was served to us on the wind-swept deck. Borge was asked to identify one of the delicacies.

"That's a hard-blown egg," he said.

"What kind of fish in this?" asked a guest. "Tuna?"

"Yes," Borge said. "It's a pi-ano tuna."

"You have been giving piano concerts for many years," someone observed. "Do you ever play at home for your own enjoyment?"

"Oh, yes," Borge said. "I'm the only one who does enjoy it."

"You certainly have a wonderful fan," another guest commented. "Where do you get it?"

"I got most of it on my face," Borge said.

Borge, who has just returned from a tour of the Orient, was asked for his opinion of the Far East.

"Sometimes I don't think it's far enough," he said.

One of the crew members told us that Borge had sailed the yacht on the open seas in all sorts of heavy weather. We asked Borge if he had ever had any serious difficulty with the vessel.

"Yes, I've had some trouble paying for it," he said.

At this point we passed the Mount Vernon excursion boat, which was loaded with tourists.

"That must be Liberator's yacht," Borge said.

I guess that sailing with Borge is what is meant by the old expression "down to the sea in quips."

Stork Wins Race Again

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI) — Mrs. Leslie Marshall, 24, lost another race with the stork Wednesday, but it didn't bother the Navy wife much — she's only won one of five races.

Aid by her 27-year-old husband, Wednesday's race ended in the family car on the way to Paradise Valley Hospital where both mother and child were reported in good condition today.

Mrs. Marshall's first child, Leslie, 6, was born in an elevator of a Corpus Christi, Tex., hospital. Yvonne, 5, arrived in the lobby of a Norwalk, Calif., hospital. Timothy, 3, was born in an ambulance on the way to an Oakland, Calif., hospital. Robert, 2, narrowly beat the stork to Paradise Valley Hospital.

"Next time," said Mrs. Marshall, "I'm going to wear track shoes."
